Hauptmann's Defense Maps HighestCourt Fight for Life

News Cheers Man Facing Death for Lindbergh Kidnap-Slaying.

Prison Releases His Autobiography

Wife Visits Death House on 10th Anniversary of Their Wedding.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 10.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann and his wife, Anna, marked the tenth anniversary of their wedding today in the death house while his lawyers mapped the preliminary strategy for the Supreme Court fight they will wage in an attempt to save him from the electric chair.

Unless he wins this fight or the Court of Pardons commutes his sentence to life imprisonment, the latter a question of grave doubt, he probably will go to his death, one of his lawyers, Egbert Rosecrans, said. No application for clemency will be made, Rosecrans said, until all legal moves are exhausted.

The promise of further fight and the visit of his wife brought back to Hauptmann today some of the confidence he manifested throughout his long trial and his eight months in death row before the Court of Errors and Appeals sustained his conviction in a unanimous decision yesterday.

Autobiography Released.

Coincident with the visit of Mrs. Hauptmann, the warden of the prison, Col. Mark O. Kimberling, released Hauptmann's autobiography to his attorneys, Rosecrans and C. Lloyd Fisher. They had striven for months to have the manuscripts released in order to sell it to help finance Hauptmann's appeal.

The story of the German former machine gunner's life, written in longhand in German, was completed May 4, and Hauptmann requested at that time that he be allowed to give to his wife and lawyers.

"The autobiography," Col. Kimberling said today in a statement, "was translated into English, carefully read by the principal keeper, who discussed the possibilities of release with Gov. Hoffman, Commissioner (of Institutions and Agencies) Ellis and the prison board of governors.

"It was felt that no permission should be granted for the release * * * while Hauptman's case was on appeal to the Court of Errors and Appeals. There appeared to be little or no basis for objections to its release following the decision of the court."

Regains Composure.

Hauptmann wrote swiftly, for the manuscript is 218 pages long and was not started until the middle of March, fully a month after he was convicted at Flemington by a jury of eight men and four women of the kidnap-slaying of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.

Hauptmann, who left his evening meal untouched last night after Fisher broke the news of the errors court's decision to him, slept until noon today and then ate a lunch of barley soup, French fried potatoes, vegetable salad, coffee and rolls. He asked that his steak be kept until later.

The principal keeper said Hauptmann seemed to have regained his usual composure. He played three-handed pinochle with two of his guards until Fisher and Rosecrans arrived. They reassured him they would carry his case to the Supreme Court.

Later Mrs. Hauptmann arrived and spent an hour in the death house. Her face was drawn and white, and she had nothing to say outside the prison.

Rosecrans today belittled the value of the new evidence the defense was reported to have found recently, and conceded Hauptmann's chance lay in a successful Supreme Court fight or in an appeal for clemency to the Board of Pardons.

Basis for Appeal.

The Supreme Court appeal will be based on the grounds that Hauptmann's constitutional rights were violated by the "inflammatory" summation of Attorney General David T. Wilentz, by the State's varying theories as to how the baby died, and through the alleged failure to sequester the jury properly.

These were defense points made in the appeal to the Court of Errors and Appeals. With every other legal point they were swept aside by the court, which held the trial had been fair and properly conducted.

Rosecrans, Fisher and Frederick A. Pope, third of Hauptmann's lawyers, will meet tomorrow, perhaps at Blairstown, to discuss the new appeal.

The defense attorneys early next week will apply to Chancellor Luther A. Campbell for an order to keep the record in the Court of Errors and Appeals, which would, in effect, prevent the fixing of a new date for execution. Before he can set a new date, Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard must have the record in the case before him.

Chamber Poll Weighs Trend Of New Deal

Four Questions Are Put to Members on Basis of Earlier Study.

By William V. Nessly.

Four questions on which the 1,500-member organizations of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will express their opinion of trends of legislaiton under the New Deal were announced by the chamber yesterday.

They are:

1. Should there be extension of Federal jurisdiction into matters of State and local concern?

2. Should the Federal Government at the present time exercise Federal spending power without relation to revenue?

3. Should there be Government competition with private enterprise for regulatory or other purposes?

4. Should all grants of authority by Congress to the executive department of the Federal Government be within clearly defined limits?

The basis of the referendum is the highly critical report of a special committee, selected early in the year, to make a study of legislative trends under the Roosevelt Administration. The report was submitted to the directors of the chamber at their meeting here September 20.

The committee making the study was composed of John W. O'Leary, chaiman, Chicago manufacturer and a former president of the national chamber; Harry Scherr, lawyer, of Huntington, W. Va., and a director of the chamber, and T. Guy Woolford, of Atlanta, Ga., a vice president of the chamber.

The report was forwarded to member organizations, but with the explanation that "the board of directors in authorizing submission of a report to referendum neither approves the report no dissents from it." The board pointed out that only the vote of the member or-

120 Americans Aboard As Rex Leaves Italy

Genoa, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—The giant steamer Rex sailed today with 1,500 passengers, including 120 Americans.

Most of the Americans laughed when asked if they were afraid to travel on Italian ships in view of President Roosevelt's proclamation warning them that such would be at their own risk. Rosa Ponselle, opera star, was among them.

Triplets Rhymed.

Texarkana, Ark., Oct. 10 (A.P.).—A politically minded Negro couple used rhyme and rhythm to name their triplets. Two boys and a girl, born today, were given the names of "Franklin D.," "Huey P.," and "Hattie C.," after the President, the late Louisiana dictator and the United States Senator from Arkansas.

12,000 Mark Academy Birthday As Navy Defeats Virginia, 26-7

Costume Ball and Sham Battle Are Features of 90th Anniversary.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 10.—With an elaborate program which included patriotic speeches, a sham battle, luncheons, dinners, a football game, and a costume ball, the United States Naval Academy today celebrated its ninetieth birthday.

Long before 10 o'clock this morning, the time set for the opening of festivities, this picturesque town was jammed with cars bearing old grads back to their alma mater and bringing visiting notables and friends of midshipmen to the anniversary party.

The gay crowd reached its peak in the afternoon when more than 12,000 persons filed into Thompson Stadium to watch the Navy team romp to victory over the University of Virginia eleven.

With true military precision, the program began exactly on the appointed hour. Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, welcomed the guests from the entrance of Mahan Hall. Only about 500 were gathered before him on the grounds. Others were making a tour of the campus, staging reunions with old classmates or picking out choice locations from which to watch the sham battle a half-hour later.

Admiral Sellers reviewed the founding of the Academy on October 10, 1845, when the equipment was scanty and the enrollment was 50. Today fine buildings, all built within the last 45 years, and a student body of 2,022, make up the institution. Withing the 90 years since its founding the Academy has graduated 12,196 men.

The superintendent, in describing the changes wrought through the years, said:

"But one thing has not changed. That is the honor, truthfulness, and character maintained by midshipmen and the spirit of the academy."

Rally Nullifies 97-Yard Touchdown Play by the Cavaliers.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 10.—Virginia had the initiative, but a swashbuckling crew of Navy gridmen had the "finishitive" this afternoon as they celebrated the ninetieth anniversary of the founding of the Academy with a crushing 26-7 victory over the gay Cavaliers.

It was a fitting climax to the celebration, and until the last period a thrilling game that had the customers bobbing up and down like a shelfful of jacks-in-the-box.

Navy outplayed its guest by a wide margin, rolling up 340 yards from scrimmage and 24 first downs, to 31 yards and 4 first downs for the Tebell-coached men. But it was the daring of the Old Dominion squad, sometimes successful, that made it a ball game.

The affair possessed the elements of almost every kind of football. Virginia seemed headed for one of the season's most astounding upsets when it rammed home the game's first touchdown early in the second period after holding Navy fairly even throughout the first. Then, when Navy scored, it looked as though it would develop into a surprisingly close and hard-fought battle. But it finally resolved itself into another foot race.

Martin Plans Drive.

Harry Martin, spearhead of Virginia's attack, it was who engineered the plays that threw Navy's usually stoical defense into confusion and finally brought his team its touchdown. Mr. Martin seemed to have less regard for orthodox football than Ethiopia has for the price of Italian tapestry. Dumb football, most coaches would call it, but it worked, and that's all Martin seemed to care about.

His first blow at naval supremacy was struck early in the first period after Navy, failing to gain following the opening kickoff, kicked to Martin on his own 20. The versatile fullback ran it back to midfield and then, on the next play, caught 10,000 fans and the 11 Middie footballers napping with a long pass over the sidelines to Half Back A. B. Conner, who had been playing "sleeper." Conner ran 45 yards to Navy's 7, where Schmidt chased him out of bounds.

This masterful stroke was wasted, however, when the Tars braced and held for three downs, so Martin dropped back on the 15-yard mark and, kicking from an angle, attempted a placement. It was wide, however, and Navy took the ball on its own 20.

Holds on 2-Yard Line.

Virginia also displayed a strong defense early in the game, when, after an exchange of kicks, Navy marched down to the 2-yard line, where, with four downs to make the necessary distance, failed to score.

Virginia's great stand was temporarily interrupted by the end of the period and the insertion of a brand-new Navy eleven, but the

Alexandria Gazette Threatened by Fire

The plant of the Alexandria Gazette, America's oldest daily newspaper, was threatened by fire last night. The blaze was discovered on the fourth floor, which is used as a storage space for the books and papers of the defunct Virginia Safe Deposit and Trust Co.

Firemen of Alexandria companies No. 1 and No. 4 managed to confine the blaze to the fourth floor and in an hour had it extinguished.

The Alexandria Gazette was established in 1784. Other daily newspapers had been established in this country before that, but none of them can boast, like the Gazette, that its publication has been uninterrupted. When the Union forces destroyed the Gazette's plant in the Civil War, the editor got out a handbill in lieu of a regulation-size paper.

Close 5-Horse Finish in Sixth Steals Laurel Race Spotlight

By Walter Haight,

Laurel, Md., Oct. 10.—The scheduled feature race failed to prove the outstanding event on today's racing program at Laurel. The sixth race stole the show, despite the fact that it was tagged with the word "claiming." Five of the seven horses in the 6-furlong struggle reached the imaginary wire inches apart.

The majority of those in the crowd of 7,500 were satisfied to let the judges separate them. The officials went into their usual huddle and came out with the first four horses in this order: Dartle, Red Wagon, Heading Home and Isaiah. Wise Prince, the other member of the blanket finish which some thought was as good as second, was placed in fifth position.

There was no pace-setter galloping away with the early part of the running. At least four horses always were battling to get in front. It was the most exciting race of the present meeting.

Dartle's victory was hardly taken for granted. The chief money went to Isaiah and Dowdy Dell, the latter one of the two horses that played no part in the gang finish. Dartle paid a $9.60 mutuel and finished like a million dollars.

The chartmaker called the finish nose, nose, head and nose which means a very tight ending in any language.

Dartle played little part in the early running as Red Wagon, Isiah,

Roman Envoys Enraged as 50 Nations Concur in Sanctions.

Penalties Are Due End of Next Week

Lifting of Arms Ban on Ethiopia, Imposing of One on Il Duce Likely.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Oct. 10.—Half a hundred nations, with a deliberate silence, today ratified the verdict of war guilt against Italy by the League of Nations' Council and prepared for the enforcement of sanctions.

Shortly after the historic meeting an Italian spokesman said that if the nations try a naval blockade to back up sanctions, "it means war."

Italy, he disclosed, plans upon getting necessaries from Germany through Austria and does not fear economic sanctions. Oil, he added, can be obtained "from some other nation" which could send it to Italy through the Reich.

Fifty of the 59 members of the assembly went definitely on record in favor of economic and financial sanctions. A "general staff" was formed for the enforcement of the pressure against Premier Mussolini's nation and will hold its first meeting tomorrow.

Five Nations Absent.

Five nations were absent, Germany (which officially leaves the League October 21), Paraguay, Salvador, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic. Austria and Hungary, friends of Italy, which has protected them, opposed sanctions, and the votes of Italy and Ethiopia were not recorded. Although on record in support of economic sanctions, Switzerland made reservations concerning military ones.

A furious protest against the latest sanctions move was made by Baron Pompeo Aloisi, head of the Italian delegation. A spokesman said the Italian delegation, still awaiting orders, probably would leave for home tomorrow.

This informant said Italians are enraged over the Assembly's stand against their nation.

"Why will the world not recognize Italy is stifling unto death and needs to find an outlet?" he asked. "Why doesn't it realize it must remove the causes of war and give Italy some great open spaces where Italians may breathe?"

Will Not Bow to Force.

An icy stillness prevailed after Aloisi's impassioned plea. In contrast, most delegates warmly applauded a speech by Tekla Hawariat, the Ethiopian delegate, who said: "The Ethiopian government is ready to conclude an honorable peace * * * However long this war may last, it will not give way to force."

There was silence again when Dr. Eduard Benes, of Czechoslovakia, president of the Assembly, announced that if no more nations desired to join Italy, Austria and Hungary in expressing "a contrary view," he would record their silence as approval of the Council's indictment of Italy. No one raised a voice.

An unofficial estimate of those in closest touch with the "general staff," or co-ordination committee, is that the application of sanctions is likely to begin by the end of next week.

Eden's Words Significant.

Significance was attached to the words of Anthony Eden, of Great Britain: "Action now must be taken. It is essential that such action should be prompt."

If the committee for sanctions does not get something done soon, it was pointed out, Britain has a legal right under the Covenant to begin sanctions of her own in whatever form—economic, financial, military or naval—she may deem advisable.

Lifting of an arms embargo from Ethiopia was considered a probability.

The attitude of Hungary and Austria caused grave concern. Despite their nonacceptance of the Council's report, they were invited to sit on the sanctions committee, with all League states except the belligerents.

Officials tonight said pressure probably would be brought to bear

Austrian Press Lauds Stand Against Sanctions

Vienna, Oct. 10 (A.P.).—The Austrian press enthusiastically defended today the government's stand against sanctions at Geneva.

Newspapers said the world had been informed in the most emphatic manner that Austria's friendship for Italy continues and the nation does not forget Italy maintained Austrian independence at the time of the Nazi insurrection in July, 1934.

Newspapers in Belgrade, however, took Austria and Hungary severely to task for their stand.

14,000 Italian Soldiers Invalided, Paper Says

Paris, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—The newspaper Humanite today estimated the number of Italians sick and disabled who have passed northward through the Suez Canal at 14,000. Unconfirmed reports received from French employes of the canal yesterday set the figure at 10,000.

The explorer and writer, Count Byron de Prorok, who is due at Marseilles tomorrow, wirelessed that he personally saw 40 Italians die daily of tropical diseases in Eritrea and witnessed 2,000 invalids being carried into the Eritrean highlands to escape the blistering heat.

Greece Scraps Republic, Asks Return of King

George II to Be Brought From Exile in England After Plebiscite.

By the Associated Press.

Athens, Oct. 10.—Greece kicked her 11-year-old republic into the scrap heap tonight in a swift Royalist coup d'etat, capped by a rousing vote of the National Assembly restoring the monarchy.

Amid scenes of wild rejoicing in the National Assembly building—once the royal palace—the nation's lawmakers decreed the return of dapper, monocled King George II from exile in England.

Then, despite their approval of restoration, the assemblymen decided to go on with the nation-wide plebiscite on the question November 3 in order to give the people a chance to express their opinion.

Gen. George Kondylis, who seized the reins of government in a swift and bloodless stroke today, was named regent until George comes back, and will perform the duties of the throne pending his return.

In approving the new government's decree abolishing the republican constitution, the assembly formally re-established the constitution of 1911.

(In London the King dined calmly at his hotel with his aide-de-camp, Maj. Levides, and awaited official news of the restoration. Levides said: "We have made no plans for the immediate future; his majesty has not yet been invited to return to Greece." George always has con-

Hull Statement on Neutrality Seen as Backing Moves of League.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Termination of the Italo-Ethiopian war as quickly as possible, as well as keeping this country out of that conflict, was cited as this Government's goal in carrying out its neutrality program in a significant and important statement yesterday by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Hull's statement, which pointed out that American commerce had far more to gain from a restoration of peace than "such risky and temporary trade" as might be maintained with the belligerents, was generally interpreted as a step to discourage Italo-American trade at this time and to answer those who have urged that this country should not let the opportunity for profits pass.

But more important than that, the statement, despite its cautious phraseology, was held by experienced observers to be an avowal that this Government's sympathies were with those trying to stop the conflict, in this case Great Britain, France and other League of Nations members.

Thus, for the first time, this Government has publicly revealed that its program is a double-barreled one: above all to keep the United State from being drawn into war, but also to do what it possibly can

Lesser Plea Denied Berkeley in Crash

Los Angeles, Oct. 10 (A.P.).—Superior Judge Ruben S. Schmidt today denied a motion to dismiss second-degree murder charges against Busby Berkeley, film dance director, growing out of an automobile accident in which two persons were killed and several injured. Berkeley's attorney contended that evidence introduced at the preliminary hearing was insufficient to warrant trial on the charges. Trial was set for November 18.

4 Children Hurt as Toy Wagon Crashes With Auto in Suburb

Four children were injured seriously, one perhaps fatally, late yesterday afternoon when their small coaster wagon crashed into an auto at Washington and Grove avenues, Mount Ida, Alexandria suburb.

Alfred Vermillion, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Vermillion, of 115 Grove avenue, was the most critically hurt.

Physicians at Alexandria Hospital, where all the victims were rushed after the accident, said he suffered a fractured skull, concussion of the brain, a compound fracture of his right leg and a badly torn ear. They held slight hope for his recovery last night.

Cuts of his face and head and shock were suffered by Paul Cover, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Cover, of 113 Grove avenue.

Keith Grimes, 7, and John Grimes, 6, sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Grimes, of 103 Mount Ida avenue, were cut, bruised and shocked. The older Grimes child may have a skull fracture, physicians said.

The accident occurred as the wagon turned a corner. The driver of the car, George P. Conner, of Walnut street, Vienna, Va., said a hedge obscured his vision. Witnesses told police he was traveling at a moderate speed at the time of the crash.

Immediately after the accident he was taken into custody and later released under $500 bond.

At Casualty Hospital yesterday George Howard, 35, colored, of Beltsville, died of injuries sustained October 7 when the truck he was driving crashed into a sign on the highway near his home.

More Death Spread From Sky in South

1,000 Eritreans Desert to Emperor; Foes' Plane Crashes, 2 Killed.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Oct. 10.—Hordes of savage warriors marched out of the mountains and deserts of Ethiopia tonight to throw a vast wall of fighting men about this proud capital.

They marched by tens of thousands, under the command of Emperor Haile Selassie's most trusted generals, as their government announced a new rain of Italian bombs in the south had killed many of their countrymen.

The fall of Aksum, ancient capital of the Queen of Sheba and storied shrine of the Holy Ark of the Covenant, was announced by the Italian minister, Luigi Vinci-Gigliucci, who got his walking papers from Selassie.

Bombing Planes Spare City.

Italy's great bombing planes, said reports which filtered out of Aksum before communications lines were cut, apparently spared that hallowed city, centuries old when Rome was born.

Muttering maledictions on the Fascist invaders, Aksum's guardian monks scurried out of the city bearing many of their sacred relics these reports said.

It was to mystic Aksum, legend has it, that Menelek, son of Sheba and Solomon, fled from Jerusalem bearing the true Ark of the Covenant and the Ten Commandments. There, eerie monolithic obelisks, once sacred altars, dot the valley and line the trail to the sacred mountains.

Death Rains From Sky.

Nine Italian planes, said a government communique, bombed Gorahei, near Gerlogubi, on the southern front, and rained lethal projectiles on the Ethiopian posts of Taffarikatama and Jialmo, killing many. (The latter two towns are not shown on maps.)

A delayed dispatch from Harar, timed at 9:15 p. m. Wednesday, said the governor of that key city in the southeast had ordered wide breaches cut in the walls to facilitate evacuation, in the belief an Italian drive from the north is imminent.

The dispatch said 10,000 Hararites, mostly women, already had fled to the hills.

The Ethiopians there believed a fierce Italian drive, employing tanks, airplanes and heavy bombs, would come from the north when sufficient enemy forces had been concentrated in the vicinity of Jijiga.

Plane Reported Crashed.

The Ethiopian communique also said an Italian plane had crashed at Garaalta, in the north, with two fliers killed and two dying.

Italian infantrymen were reported advancing in the Webbe and Shibeli region, but it was claimed a thousand native Eritrean soldiers had deserted to Ethiopia and were nearing Makale with Italian planes in pursuit.

Fifty thousand Ethiopian troops, equipped with modern arms, were marching to the defense of Addis Ababa under Ras Guetatcho, governor general of Kaffa Province. Twenty thousand more were on their way under command of Dedjazmatch Apte Mariam, another provincial chief who wears half-moon earrings to proclaim his prowess as a soldier and elephant hunter.

Other Armies Hurrying to Aid.

Forty thousand soldiers under one of Selassie's relatives, Makonne Dimissi, governor of Wallega Province, likewise were moving on the capital. Dedjasmach Mechacha, of Kambata Province, already had arrived and was encamped with his 15,000 troops.

Other armies, from various sectors, also were coming.

Selassie, who has pledged his entire fortune in foreign banks to the defense of his land, today informed the United States that Ethiopa will adhere to the Washington Treaty of 1922, outlawing poison gas. This

Secretary Roosevelt extolled the virtues of the founder, declaring he had transmitted to the institution "his wise and generous spirit."

Bancroft Speaks.

Dr. Bancroft expressed the hope that a graduate of the academy might some day become Secretary of the Navy and said "an efficient Navy is a protection against having war thrust upon us."

After Admiral Sellers had introduced 25 distinguished guests, most of whom were descendans ot fthose who contributed to the founding, the audience joine dthe crowd which lined Worden Field, waiting for the sham battle.

With the crack of a singe rifle, the intensive firing began. While a land force tried to protect its position on the field, the attacking horde, under cover of heavy artillery and rifle fire, slowly advanced. The invaders were augmented by a miniature fleet which steamed up the Severn, and by seaplanes, which strafed the defense's entrenched army. Flame and smoke from the blank ammunition gave a realistic appearance to the struggle which culminated after a half-hour of fighting in a victory for the attacking force.

After the battle luncheon was served to alumni and their guests, numbering 1,500, at the Officers Club.

Admiral and Mrs. Sellers entertained 100 guests at the superintendent's quarters. Among these were Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, and Mrs. Nice; Dr. W. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University; Dr. John L. Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, and Mrs. Newcomb; Harry C. Byrd, acting president of the University of Maryland, and Admiral W. H. Standley and Mrs. Standley.

Boy, 12, Saves Pal On Electric Wire

Knocked Down 3 Times, He Frees Friend With Stick

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Oct. 10.—William Payne, 12, of Joppa, was credited today with saving his friend, Kenneth Chilcoat, 15, of Joppa, from serious injury—if not from detah—by electric shock.

It was not until Kenneth was unconscious from contact with a highly charged wire that young Payne succeeded in freeing him. The Chilcoat youth was recovering today. Payne also suffered several shocks and burns in his efforts to free his friend.

Young Chilcoat's rifle barrel touched a guy wire supporting a high-power transmission pole while the two were squirrel hunting. There was a short circuit somewhere in the line and the charge flipped the rifle from Kenneth's hand.

Chilcoat fell forward on the line and was held there by the current.

Payne caught his feet, but the current knocked him down. He fell twice more as he tried to free his friend with the rifle barrel and a wet stick. Kenneth was unconscious then.

Payne finally dislodged the wire from his friend with a dry stick. He dashed water on his face to revive him, then ran a mile to summon Kenneth's brother, Stanley.

Between You and Me

Ethiopia Is a Long Way From the Pacific Coast; T. R.'s 'Big Stick' Speech Recalled.

By Raymond Clapper

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Oct. 10. Out here on the edge of the Pacific, with 3,000 miles of land and 3,000 miles of Atlantic Ocean intervening, the Ethiopian conflict seems a distant thing.

Yet, far away as it is in miles, it is much in the minds of thinking persons in many walks of life here. This generation, even on the western side of the Rockies, knows well that trouble in Europe may reach its hand across this vast distance because Pacific Coast sons, as those of other parts of the United States, lie under the battlefields of France.

The first thought on the Pacific, as the possible implications of the tense situation in Europe are canvassed, is a feeling of satisfaction that the American naval defense has been built up to the strength it has. This heavy building program, partly a by-product of the Administration's spending policy with regard to public works, and partly a corollary to the isolationist policy of the United States, is especially present in the minds of the people on the Pacific Coast because the fleet is just back from Pacific maneuvers and is again in southern California waters.

The batlle maneuvers which Mr. Roosevelt witnessed just before he put out to sea on his fishing vacation emphasized the developments taking place in naval technique.

There has been no major naval battle since Jutland—almost 20 years ago. The last one before that was in the Russo-Japanese war at the beginning of the century. With only one major engagement over a period of 35 years where complete fleets were brought into contact, naval technique goes ahead on a purely experimental and somewhat academic basis. The Battle of Jutland revealed some glaring deficiencies which had gone largely unobserved by naval experts. One of these was the lack of fire protection for ship magazines, causing internal explosions. As a result of that battle, changes were made in post-Jutland ships.

Similarly, when an attempt was made after the war to sink obsolete war vessels by air bombing, an unexpected difficulty upset the aim of the bombing aircraft completely. Previously, when practicing on targets, the air bombers, consciously or otherwise, had the assistance of land objects to aid them in fixing aim. But when they attempted to drop bombs on a target out at sea, the absence of these auxiliary guiding objects threw them off and made their earlier percentage of hits in target practice look ridiculous.

Such instances as these always are in the minds of naval officers. They try to anticipate every circumstance, yet they know that, in actual battle, conditions which they had never anticipated might well arise to confound them.

Some phases of the simulated battle which President Roosevelt witnessed were secret. Accordingly, for military reasons, photographers were asked not to photograph them. Admiral Reeves, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, requested that nothing be written concerning them. All that can be said is that these phases concerned new developments and that the experience in these maneuvers added to the store of knowledge concerning their application.

It is possible to discuss one feature which illustrates the changing nature of naval warfare and the precision which is developing regarding it. That is the use of aircraft. Although remnants of the old controversy between the battleship and the airplane survive, naval opinion generally seems to have accepted aircraft as a major factor in naval warfare. Instead of arguing about it, attention is now concentrated on achieving the maximum utility.

Equally important is the progress made in anti-aircraft protection. Automatic range finders have developed to the point where the human element is reduced to a minor role in anti-aircraft defense. These automatic range finders are adjusted to take into account the speed of the target, of the moving ship, the wind, the temperature, the reaction time of the gunner, and a number of other factors. All the gunner has to do is to watch for the decimal figure and keep his sight on the cross-hair. He doesn't see his target overhead.

In the power dive attack from the air, planes drop perpendicularly from 10,000 feet and release their bombs within a few hundred feet of the target. It is estimated that even with this terrific speed and the diminished expanse of target exposed by the diving plane, battle against efficient antiaircraft gunnery would result in 50 per cent casualties in the attacking air force. The theory is that even at the loss of one plane out of every two, enough hits would be scored to disable the ship under attack.

The number of hits necessary to put a ship out of battle would vary with the type of ship and the location of the hit. For instance, one hit which tore away a rudder and put a ship out of control, would be practically as effective as sinking, which would require many perfectly placed hits. Deck armor and blistering have been perfected so that it is almost impossible to disable the internal control apparatus without sinking the ship.

Torpedo technique also has developed rapidly. Torpedoes can be set so that they travel far under the surface, without leaving any tell-tale wake, rising to the proper depth just before striking. The also can be set to take an elbow course so that, even when launched from an angle, they can be made to turn en route and head in directly broadside to make the most effective strike.

To what purpose is this vast effort, costing more than $1,000,000 a day, and to which scientific invention with micro-precision is being applied as actively as in any phase of human activity?

It is directed to protection of a country which has no designs on other people's territory, which is interested mainly in standing upon its own feet and going about its own business, but which unfortunately lives in a world where there are rulers who do not hesitate to whip out a gun and start shooting on a crowded thoroughfare.

Chamber's Poll Weighs Theory Of Roosevelt

Four Questions Are Put Members on Basis of Adverse Study.

ganizations can commit the chamber, and that until such vote is taken "the report rests solely upon the authority of those who have signed it."

Trends Now Question.

The chamber previously has expressed its view on individual congressional acts, but in the new questionnaire is called upon to take a stand on the "trend" or theories said to be embodied in the outstanding enactments.

The report lists the most widely discussed laws enacted at all sessions of Congress since the Roosevelt Administration came into power and asserts that no previous three successive sessions have ever enacted so many statutes embodying legislative policies.

Under the heading of expenditures, it declares that since March 9, 1933, there has been made available for spending from the Treasury a sum approximating $26,000,000, "together with authorizations for Federal agencies to borrow directly or contingently on Government credit and spend, further amounts aggregating almost $7,000,000,000." About $10,000,000,000 of the appropriations remain to be spent. Actual expenditures were placed at $16,-99,297,000, with revenues over the same eriod aggregating $8,270,000. The interest-bearing public debt was said to have increased $8,429,-000,000, from $20,603,000,000 to $29,-032,655,000.

Listing emergency expenditures, as distinguished from costs of the regular activities of the Government, at $8,391,000,000, the committee held that relief expenditures had not been confined to releiving the need for necessities, but cited the $50,000,000 allotted to the Youth Administration and plans to use Federal funds to help students continue attendance at high schools and colleges.

Report Hits AAA.

"But there is in the Agricultural Adjustment Act an even more extreme example of disbursement of public funds for private benefits," the report said.

Provisions in other acts which "violate the principle of personal responsibility—the principle that each person, not in need, should pay for what he himself receives," were listed. The railroad retirement act, "where young workers with higher rates of compensation are made to pay more than their share," and the Federal deposit insurance law, "which places upon large banks and large deposits part of the costs for smaller banks and smaller deposits" were given as illustrations. The Frazier-Lemke act likewise was recalled, and "an extreme instance of use of Federal funds to confer personal benefits" was seen in the TVA.

On what it termed a "steady endeavor to replace with Federal jurisdiction the jurisdiction of the States over matters heretofore considered as belonging solely in the field of State and local self-government," he report declared that this legislative enactments. It concluded trend appears and reappears in that this has happened so often that it "asumes the character of a concerted policy.

This extension of Federal powers, the committee said, has brought these other trends:

"Exercises of the spending power without regard to revenues, for purposes within the powers of neither Federal nor State governments, and on a scale that brings to every business and to every individual the dangers flowing from a continuing unbalanced budget.

"Extension of competition by Government enterprise into the fields of private endeavor, for the purpose of regulating private enterprise or otherwise.

"Regulation by the Federal Government of all forms of production, industrial and agricultural, and all local marketing and retailing, with the Federal Government infringing upon the individual in his everyday affairs in making a living, in planting crops, in working at a trade for himself, or in working as an empioye of another.

"Delegation of powers to the executive department of the Federal Government, and constantly enlarging administrative agencies and bureaucracy for detailed applications of measures, with all decisions for the whole country at a central point and consequent delays and expense for citizens even as to matters in themselves of small importance."

tended his people would call him back, "sooner or later.")

Crowds in the packed assembly galleries joined in wild applause for the vote of restoration. The Archbishop of Athens, who previously had blessed the proceedings, led the rejoicing.

Kondylis, the former minister of war, ended the controversy over restoration of the monarchy with dramatic suddenness today.

He forced the resignation of the government of Premier Tsaldaris, proclaimed martial law and threw troops about public buildings. But not a shot was fired.

President Alexander Zaimis prepared his resignation and the 5-foot-6 Kondylis, "Little Corporal," to his admirers, named himself president of the council and minister of economics. To other cabinet posts he appointed his royalist associates.

Pretender Threatens

Madrid, Oct. 10 (AP).—Prince Eugene Lascaris, a pretender to the Greek throne along with former King George, declared tonight his followers would "convert Greece into a river of blood" unless he is placed on the throne.

Informed by telephone of the royalist coup in Athens, Lascaris, from Saragoza, termed George a "usurper."

The prince said his followers were demanding a plebiscite to determine who would succeed to the throne. He asserted a group of them were coming from Athens Tuesday to arrange details for a campaign to make him king.

He declined to reveal names of the commission, asserting "to do so would sign their death warrants."

Spain has been the home of Prince Lascaris since his father, the late imperial Prince Manuel of Greece, came here in exile. He has become a naturalized Spaniard.

U. S. Neutrality Boycott Aimed To Halt War

Hull Statement Is Seen as Backing League's Moves for Peace.

to terminate the conflict through a popular economic boycott of the belligerents. Circumstances are such that this boycott will fall far heavier on Italy, deemed the aggressor by the League.

Viewed in tha tlight, Secretary Hull's statement yesterday confirms the contention made earlier in the week in The Post that this Government, acting on its own initiative, without commitments or consultations with any other nation, was working hand and glove with the League in its efforts to end the war in Africa.

Secretary Hull's statement was intended as an elaboration and clarification of the policy inaugurated last Saturday night, when President Roosevelt declared that, in the specific circumstances of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict, "I desire it to be understood that any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either of the belligerents do so at their own risk."

Interprets Roosevelt's Aims.

This was in addition to his arms embargo proclamation and his warning that Americans might travel on Italian or Ethiopian ships (the latter has none) only at "their own risk." His statement, withdrawing the protection of the Government from "transactions of any character," however, was regarded as more important because it is more inclusive and sweeping, if somewhat vague.

For that reason there has been a controversy as to what the President really meant to convey. Did his statement constitute governmental disapproval of all transactions with Italy—in fact was it a suggestion to boycott Italy and Ethiopia economically? Some exporters thought so. One large New York department store thought likewise, as did many observers here.

Or did the President intend that there should be "business as usual," but that individuals must assume all the risk and not expect that the Government would become involved in war because of their activities? Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper on Wednesday led correspondents to believe this was his view. His department took pains to point out that the specifically banned munitions exports were but a negligible fraction with our total trade with Italy and indicated its belief that trade would go on by appointing a second trade commissioner for Rome.

In the face of the President's statement, Romolo Angelone, commercial attache of the Italian Embassy, declared in New York Tuesday that League action against Italy would give the United States an opportunity to double its market in his country. Hull's statement yesterday, while not directed to Angelone's remarks, might well be taken as a reply.

Hull Clarifies Situation.

Thus Secretary Hull at his press conference yesterday was asked whether he cared to clear up the apparent misunderstanding and elaborate on what the President said about American interests trading with belligerents. Hull answered confidentially, but later—apparently to correct misunderstandings—the tSate Department made his remarks public in a formal statement.

The statement follows:

"The language of the President's statement has a thoroughly well-defined meaning and every person should be able to grasp its meaning and its implications.

"Technically, of course, there is no legal prohibition—apart from the proclamation governing the export of arms—against our people entering into transactions with the belligerents or either of them.

The warning given by the President in his proclamation concerning travel on belligerent ships and his general warning that during the war any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either of the belligerents do so at their own risk, were based upon the policy and purpose of keeping this country out of war—keeping it from being draw into war.

"It certainly was not intended to encourage transactoins with the belligerents.

Our people might well realize that the universal state of business uncertainty and suspense on account of the war is seriously handicapping business between all countries, and that the sooner the war is terminated the sooner the restoration and stabilization of business in all parts of the world, which is infinitely more important than trade with the belligerents, will be brought about.

This speedy restoration of more full and stable trade conditions and relationships among the Nations is by far the most profitable objective for our people to visualize, in contrast with such risky and temporary trade as they might maintain with belligerent nations.

I repeat that our objective is to keep this country out of war.

Il Duce's Envoys Enraged as 50 Nations Concur in Sanctions Vote.

upon Hungary and Austria to prevent transit across their soil from neutral countries, like Germany, of war and other materials destined for Italy.

"Don't buy anything from Italy"—that is the British idea of the best way of putting the screws upon Italy.

Impressive was the note in today's speeches that there was no idea behind sanctions of punishing people. The dominating note was that Italy should be "brought to her senses" and shown that in these days "war is out of fashion," as one delegate said.

There was no official discussion of inviting nonmember states, such as the United States and Japan, to sit on the sanctions committee as observers. The project apparently was dropped, although negotiations through diplomatic channels with Washington and Tokyo may come.

Two U. S. Observers Present.

The United States has two observers here—Hugh S. Cumming, executive assistant to Secretary of State Hull, and Prentiss B. Gilbert, American consul.

While the British idea is to "buy nothing from Italy," which already has a big unfavorable balance of trade, the French are inclined to tackle the problem from another angle—the cutting off of exports to Italy.

League officials anticipate that the sanctions committee will harmonize or combine these two methods of attack.

Austria and Hungry probably will be asked to refrain from purchases abroad for resale to Italy. There is no sanction provided for violation of this, but League states could impose an indirect sanction by refusing to sell to Hungary and Austria.

Britain undoubtedly will recommend as a first sanction the lifting of the arms embargo against Ethiopia and also propose imposition of a general arms embargo upon Italy.

France, through Premier Laval, pledged fulfillment of her obligations under the Covenant, asserting: "We can neither infringe the Covenant nor allow it to be weakened."

But Laval, without mentioning Mussolini by name, addressed an appeal to him when he said, "Let us search for a solution by conciliation." Eden also seconded this appeal when he said:

"We are prepared wholeheartedly to co-operate in an early peaceful settlement in accordance with the principles of the Covenant."

Spokesmen for numerous other nations, including Russia and Mexico, pledged support to the Covenant.

The Swiss delegate pledged his country to act in solidarity with other members of the League, but said Switzerland was not bound to take part in sanctions which through their nature in effect "would expose our neutrality to real danger." He emphasized that Switzerland is exempt by the League from participation in military sanctions.

treaty was signed by Great Britain, Italy, Japan and the United States.

At the same time the government denied reports the Negus' son-in-law, Dedjasmatch Haile Selassie, had been killed. It was said he is in station at Makale, 80 miles from Eritrea.

Bomb Shelters Built.

American missionaries remained at their posts throughout Ethiopa. At Addis Ababa, the American charge d'affaires, Cornelius Van H. Engert, ordered a bombproof shelter built beneath the legation.

Similar shelters were being built by the French legation, and the Emperor himself ordered the utmost precautions taken against air raids.

Vinci-Gigliucci, Italian minister, was asked by Selassie to depart immediately. The ruler's charge d'affaires in Rome, Negradas Yesus, also has been recalled, thus severing diplomatic relations between Italy and Ethiopia.

Many thought the Emperor's action in asking Vinci-Gigliucci to quit the country was a tacit victory for Premier Mussolini, who thus avoided recalling the envoy himself.

Vinci Voices Protest.

Vinci told the government he would like to remain here until his two consular agents from Magalo arrive, probably Sunday, but that his dozen aids could leave immediately.

He protested against the Ethiopian charge that he had used his legation radio after being requested not to.

Indications were he would be permitted to remain a few days, if he insists, but the Emperor ordered he wait at Bishoftou, Modjo, or some other resort near the capital from which he may be expelled at any time.

Italian interests will be taken over temporarily by the Belgian minister until Rome makes definite arrangements. Italian property in Ethiopia, both private and official, is worth hundreds of millions of lire, Vinci said.

Much concern was felt here for the 50 Italian Catholic missionaries in the interior who have refused to leave except on orders from the Pope.

By Morgan Baker.

SALARY inequities and lack of promotion assurance prevailing in the Immigration and Naturalization Service will be the object of a militant reform campaign when Congress convenes, it was indicated yesterday by Edward Zucker, president of the Association of Immigration and Naturalization Inspectors and Examiners.

BAKER.

Assisting Mr. Zucker in the plans for improvement of the status of this group of Labor Department employes is George E. Tolman, counsel and Washington representative of the association.

The association officers commend the efforts of Commissioner General Daniel W. McCormack to improve the inspection and examining conditions. However, they point out that he can do little without authority from the Budget Bureau and Congress. Approximately $30,000 in Labor apropriations was stricken from the third deficiency bill last winter.

"Our association cannot but recognize that there are certain well-defined salary inequities in the service as it is now organized," Mr. Zucker declared, "notably, the insufficient salary level and absence of assurance of promotion that prevail in the immigration border patrol inspector group and the just as significant low-pay rates and confusing variety of salary grades which have long endured without any scheme of promotion in the group of service clerks."

Merrell Doyle (C), FERA, was formerly one of the ace job-getters of the United States Employment Service, Labor.

As one enters the Labor Department Building through the main entrance on Constitution avenue, a handsome trophy instantly catches the eye. It is the Davis Golf Cup and has no relation to the more widely publicized trophy of the same name in tennis, but is named for the former Secretary of Labor, James J. Davis.

An anecdote is told at Labor in connection with the founding of the cup back in 1929. Robert C. Starr, now secretary-treasurer of the golf association, and who then, as now, lent his hand to many a noteworthy departmental enterprise, appeared with trepidation before the Secretary and suggested that it might be fitting to acknowledge victory in the department's tournament, then being held, by presentation of some suitable cup to the winner.

Mr. Davis warmly agreed and shortly thereafter Bob Starr was called into the Secretary's office and just about keeled over as the Secretary revealed the cup he had just bought.

"I suppose," Mr. Davis said, "that a person winning three times shall be entitled to keep the cup."

"No, sir;" Mr. Starr retorted, an eye on the magnificent cup, "as far as I'm concerned the department is going to keep that thing for just about 100 years!"

Seven names now appear on the cup, with winning dates and scores, as follows:

R. B. Sprinkler, Office of Secretary, 1929, 95.

I. F. Wixon, Bureau of Immigration, 1930, 83.

B. R. Landis, Bureau of Immigration, 1931, 86.

I. M. Enright, Bureau of Naturalization, 1932, 82.

T. W. O'Brien, Bureau of Immigration, 1933, 87.

Census Executive Speaks.

Commerce Lodge No. 9, American Federation of Government Employes, launched its fall activities in an enthusiastic manner last night at a dinner meeting, with Dr. Stuart A. Rice, assistant director, Census Bureau, as guest speaker. Much credit for success of the affair is due to the efforts of James Copeland, (F), Census Bureau, in charge of the program, and Leonard Kemp, lodge president.

Representatives of Government employe organizations and civic leaders are expected to attend the conference on the parking problem at 8:30 p. m. today at the home of D. E. McQueary, 3842 Windam place northwest. Mr. McQueary, who is with Veterans Administration, is president of the Association for Adequate Parking Facilities for Government Employes.

You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Hall & Dennison and Gaylene Sisters Revue and other acts; screen, Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper in "O'Shaughnessy's Boy"); or to P, Loew's Palace (second week of Clark Gable in "Call of the Wild"); or C, Loew's Columbia (Will Rogers in "Steamboat 'Round the Bend").

The mail must go through! This thought came as we saw a heavy hauling truck dashing through the corridors in the basement of Commerce Building with one letter aboard.

Oyster Roast Saturday.

Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, Employes, is completing plans for American Federation of Government an oyster roast and outing at Great Falls, Va., Saturday from 2 to 9 p. m. All members of the federation and their friends are invited, Henry C. Iler (F), vice president, says. Fishing, music, dancing and plenty of oysters will be features.

Patent Office Resignations.

Four men are reported to have resigned at Patent Office, as follows:

John A. Blair, examiner, who will engage in patent practice in the firm of Harness, Dickey, Pierce & Hann, of Detroit.

A. L. Snow, who is going with the patent department of the Standard Oil Co. of California, at San Francisco.

J. Arthur Young, who has accepted a position in the patent department of the Phillips Petroluem Co., of Bartlesville, Okla.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

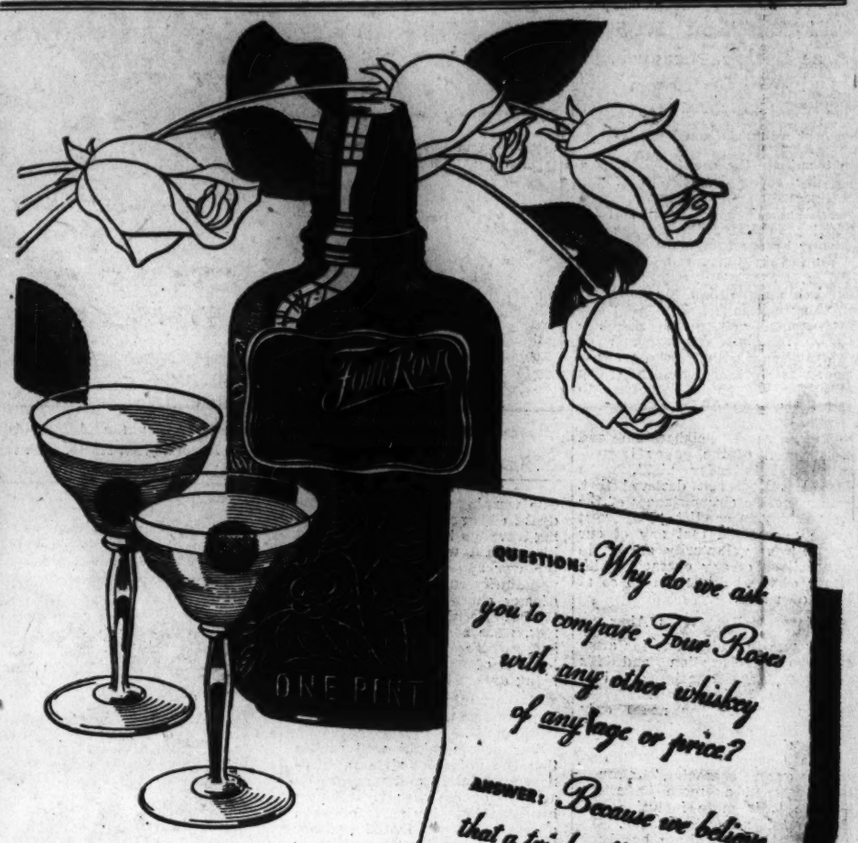
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS. —Advt.



Frankfort Distilleries, of Louisville & Baltimore, also make Paul Jones, Old Oscar Pepper and Mattingly & Moore—all fine blends of straight whiskies.

The price of Four Roses in full pints is $1.49.

QUESTION: Why do we ask you to compare Four Roses with any other whiskey of any age or price?
ANSWER: Because we believe that a trial will convince you that Four Roses is the finest whiskey you can buy—mellow, smooth, superb in flavor

Ethel Pastor Sings Tonight At Club Troika

Sons and Daughters of the Steppes Slate Gala Opening.

By Chanticleer.

The sons and daughters of the steppes dance and play for Washington tonight. Meaning that the Club Troika, dark throughout the summer months, throws open its doors at 7 p. m., ushering in the fourth season of this popular Russian night club.

And it means a triumphal return for Ethel Pastor—another milestone in success for the Russian gypsy singer, who comes back to Washington from eight big weeks atop the swank St. Moritz Hotel in New York City. With La Pastor will be starred a host of Broadway favorites originally from the land of the Czars.

There will be M. Karavaieff, who danced with Pavlowa, who is a self-taught dancer and the only one ever invited to join the Russian Imperial Ballet. And Sasha Bartnovsky and his Russian Gypsy Orchestra, Sasha who was pianist with Harry Horlick's Gypsies.

• • • •

Also on hand for the Troika's opening will be Bernard Kendall, violin virtuoso, who was employed to teach Mischa Elman's young son the rudiments of violin playing. And Dena Larena, "exotic Russian nightingale" . . . and Johnny Blue and his accordion (for a limited stay) and Valentinova and Vladimir Diloff—prima donna and basso . . . and last but not least—Alex, who presides again over the kitchen and promises delicious new concoctions.

Ah, yes, if you were a Troika enthusiast last season you'll cry "Boublichke!" to Dena Larena . . . and Dena will sing the famous "doughnut" song.

It was a grand party that Big Boss Pollio provided for the opening nighters at the Mayflower earlier in the week. The big lounge looked bigger, the lights softer and warmer, and the band sweeter, the customers louder in their expressions of easy content. Sidney did himself proud as emmcee and he had plenty of talent about which to wax oratorical. The entire cast of "Venus in Silk" was present and Sidney and the Harmon-izers played the score over and over to the delight of every one. Pete Macias and Moe Baer, from the neighboring houses of good cheer, performed as guest conductors . . . Bert Granoff, borrowed from the Habana, finally left the floor with the customers' cheers in his ears . . . smooth flowing dances contributed by Enders and Borgia from Ol' Massa Pete's Heigh-Ho. Visiting hotel men and celebrities took their bows and all in all 'twas a grand affair.

• • • •

Matt Windsor is practically stealing his own floor show. Not that the Club Volga Boatman's gypsy chorus isn't the business . . . but Impresario Windsor is a whale of a good accordionist! The show these nights really is divided into two parts, with Matt being recalled time and again for more of the squeeze-box . . . and Anna Sablukova and her chorus of 15 demanded over and over for their share of the show. Anna knows her prima-donnaing. She was a star of the Moscow Art Theater and is known on the air waves.

Did you ever hear Emery Daugherty rave? Of course you never did, because Maestro Daugherty is one of the more self-contained of the local ork leaders. But this week the smoldering fire has been fanned into some fancy elocution. Emery, in other words, is steamed up about the floor show at the La Paree. He figures that Lou Fink is about the funniest idiot who has ever graced a local floor, that Lane and Carroll are the groceries in rhythm dancing . . . that Toma Genaro is tops as an acrobatic dancer and that Ernie Andrews and his little company of femmes are a handful of aces. Dress that up with Marie Fowler and Ray Beck, of the Daugherty immediate family, and you see why Emery is saying "you'd better not skip the La Paree this week."

• • • •

By Friday the Cotton Club is getting the plot all laid for its regular Sunday Celebrity Night. A brand-new group of stage celebrities will be on hand next Sunday night—recruited from the local stages. And they'll all take a bow or go into a dance for the Cotton Club customers. And there'll be new faces all around in the new week's big floor show.

• • • •

Boss Dick Butler, of the Hamilton, is having his problems: The Rainbow Room doesn't always hold all the enthusiastic cocktailers who apply for those comfortable low divans and easy chairs! And the dance floor reached its capacity; in other words, the Hamilton's new cocktail lounge has become one of the citys most popular rendezvous. In case you haven't been in for the last week, the orchestra platform has been moved to the Fourteenth street side of the room and the space formerly occupied by the band is now additional dance floor. Nice, what?

• • • •

Harry McClure Williams, who did things with a football at Duke a few years ago, has gone into a huddle with Johnny Slaughter, out thar at the Wardman Park Continental Room, and a "musical scoreboard" soon will be an innovation for Saturday nights. Get a load of it, collegians. Babs, the Continental Room ciggie vendor, is a picture in black and gold—artistically in harmony with the bandstand's decorations. Maurice and Lucienne dance nightly. Jimmie Struthers has returned to New York, unable to shake off his illness.

• • • •

Rotarian Harry Somerville played hob with the Rotary meeting Wednesday when he dedicated and all that sort of thing the new Willard corner at noon. That would be the new cocktail center in the corner room, F and Fourteenth. Vince Callahan, of N. B. C., was so pleased with the blue decorations that he sent across the street for reinforcements immediately. It's a grand place for a fast one.

• • • •

Moe Baer and the solo aces—Bert Granoff, Jimmy Bright, Anthony Alongi and Frank Flannigan—keep the fastidious music appreciation expert happy and content at Guy Scott's Club Habana. Sandino and Fairchild dance for the dinner and supper crowds . . . Leon Brusiloff's platform at the Madrillon is dance melodies, torch singing, clowning and specialty dances. It's a big program in answer to that moot debate with Boss Peter Borras as to whether fun or food is more important with the customers. Leon is taking no chances on the "fun" aspects. They're there! . . . Young Mr. Leroy Kiser has been made a permanent attraction at the Shoreham Lounge where Barnee plays for the afternoon cocktail-and-dance parties. Marguerita Padula, of Rudy Vallee's company, is headlining the supper floor show this week.

Closing bit: That king of drummers, Bill Strickland, who takes the bows for the Capitolians at the Lotus, comes by the drumming honestly. His father and grandfather before him knew their snares. But the fourth generation turned rebel. Young Bill, age 12, is going to be a pianist, like Master Richard Koons, who plays for Papa Strickland at the Lotus. Incidentally, Bill, sr., is the kind of a person who looks forward to Friday the thirteenth. It brings him luck.

Foreign Exchange.

The dollar was slightly ahead of leading foreign currencies in most exchange centers yesterday.

In New York the British pound sterling was 1-16 of a cent lower at $4.90⅝, the French declined .00⅛ of a cent at 6.59 cents.

In London the dollar was in demand at 4.90⅞ to the pound and in Paris the American unit was steady at an equivalent of 6.586 cents to the franc.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—The final details of week-end settlements occupied most attention in the forenoon on the stock exchange today, whereafter renewed investment buying improved gilt-edged securities, oil, industrial and base metal shares. Transatlantic issues were benefited by favorable Wall street advices, while gold shares moved irregularly. The market closed firm.

Paris—A slight buying tendency was noted on the bourse today resulting in sales as traders expected nothing startling regarding the Geneva sanctions. Rentes, industrial and international issues were also higher. The market closed steady.

Berlin—Prices were higher at the opening of the bourse today, light sales being well absorbed. The closing was steadier.

CADILLAC presents

THE 1936 SERIES OF

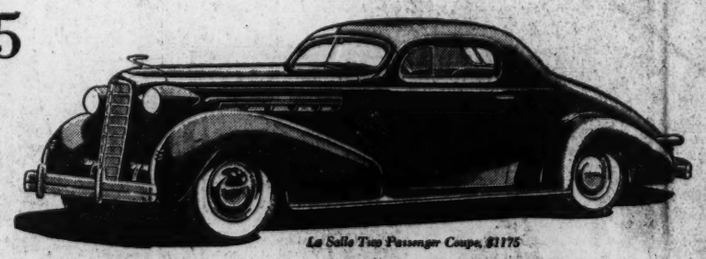
the Royal Family of Motordom

IN THE LOWEST PRICE RANGE SINCE THE DAYS OF THE SINGLE-CYLINDER CADILLAC

Today, the 1936 series of the Royal Family of Motordom—a new La Salle, a new Cadillac, and a new Cadillac-Fleetwood—are on exhibition at our showrooms. Revealing the greatest strides ever made by Cadillac in performance, comfort, safety, beauty and roadability—they also offer the pleasant surprise of startlingly lower prices. In fact, prices start at the lowest point since the days of the single-cylinder Cadillac. You are cordially invited to see and inspect these magnificent new cars. They are certain to prove a revelation.

A FINER, FASTER AND SAFER La Salle $1175

La Salle again heads the style parade and sets the new vogue. And, within its price field, its leadership is just as decided in all other phases of motor car excellence. Its performance is delightful. Its comfort is superb. And it handles, in all ways, like the thoroughbred it is. There are four body styles—a Coupe; a Convertible Coupe; a Two-door Touring Sedan; and a Five-Passenger Touring Sedan.



La Salle Two Passenger Coupe, $1175

AN ENTIRELY NEW AND FINER Cadillac $1645

For years, there has been a growing demand for a personalized Cadillac—smaller, more compact, quicker, faster and easier to handle. The new Cadillac V-8, Series 60, is the answer to that demand. On The Air Today

UNCLE ARTHUR GODFREY and Uncle Joe Cherner are at it again. Meaning that "Godfrey's Gazette" is scheduled for a new season's opening Wednesday night at 10. The show will run half an hour.

The "little Godfreys" to be announced thus far are Joe Krahling, who vocalizes with Godfrey's orchestra, and Lou Berman, whom I place in the top bracket of air comics, so far as the local precincts are concerned. None of the gender which takes to the Godfrey air personality in such a big way has been announced on the artist list as yet.

The team of Godfrey and McDonald (or McDonald and Godfrey, just as you like) takes its first bow at the Fox this afternoon as headliners on the new week's stage bill. Godfrey will have his native wit and—his band. McDonald will have his native wit. It will be enormously interesting to see htese two widely known air "names" in person on one stage—to see the audience reaction and to determine whether sports and buffoonery, or music and buffoonery get the edge of public approval. McDonald swears he will have no tricks up his sleeve. But we shall see. McDonald without one or two fast ones is cake without icing.

N.B.C. is making a gracious gesture in the direction of Lansing Hatfield tonight. At 7:45, WRC devotes 15 minutes to a reintroduction of the young fellow from Hickory, N. C., and Baltimore—who came to Washington for the Eddie Duchin competition, won and was later adjudged one of the two finalists. Hatfield will compete for the $1,000 Duchin prize on the network Tuesday night. The winner will be demined by a mail vote cast by listeners over the country. Figuring that the young barytone was comparatively unknown right here in the city which he won his honor, and from whose listeners he might well expect the greatest mail support, WRC officials decided to present him again to Washington listeners with a subtle urge that he be supported (if the listener likes him) in his contest next week. Radio folk who selected him in the preliminary audition early last summer will be guests in the studio.

All Aboard For China!

There is a significance behind the coincidence that put aviation into front-page headlines twice within the week. The first story recounted the known details of the disaster in which a transcontinental liner plowed into a Wyoming hillside. The second described the success with which the new China Clipper bore aloft her first passenger load on a test trip over Washington.

Broadly speaking, the triumph grew out of the disaster. That is to say, the progress of aviation has been made possible by its failures. The China Clipper is the beautiful machine it is only because designers and engineers have been able to draw on the knowledge gained through the breakdowns—so often fatal—of earlier attempts to construct airplanes capable of sustained flight with heavy loads.

It is interesting to observe that casual confidence with which news correspondents making the maiden voyage on the Clipper referred to the great plane's transpacific schedule, soon to begin. Less than ten years ago this country went into handsprings at the announcement that a young pilot, by name of Lindbergh, had successfully spanned the Atlantic. Less than 35 years ago two bicycle machinists first startled the country by soaring safely over the sands of Kitty Hawk on contraptions of bamboo and muslin. Before them only a scattering few, for the most part more foolhardy than ingenious, had essayed to do more than think wishfully from the Daedalian legend.

Thirty-five years of aviation and tomorrow we expect to fly to China!

The Price Of Peace.

"Force," said George Lansbury on Tuesday, "never has brought, never will and never can bring permanent peace." Thus believing, he resigns the Parliamentary leadership of the British Labor Party, because that party has committed itself to support the use of sanctions against the Italian invasion of Ethiopia.

This veteran of world amity has long been perhaps the most idealistic and certainly the most intransigeant figure in the party he is now quitting. Never, in all his political life, have even his bitterest enemies charged him with trimming the sails of his convictions to suit the shifting airs of political convenience.

As editor of the London Daily Herald, he was an able journalist who saw no virtue in any compromise. An ardent Socialist, he is that thorn in the side of militant and materialistic Socialism: A Christian Socialist. When his constituency differed from him on a matter of what he considered civic justice, he gave up his seat in Parliament. Again he preferred jail to the enforcement of a tax that he believed oppressive to the poor. Now, at 76, he chooses to end his career rather than desert his principles.

There is no just man who will not honor this decision, but there can be few practical workers for enduring international concord who will accept as workable the thesis from which the decision logically results. In 1933, the British Labor Party declared against war in any circumstances. Now it differentiates between war and sanctions. But Lansbury will make no distinction between war and punishment, even if the punishment be merited—between force used against the law and force used to preserve the law. His dilemma is that of the perfect pacifist, who, zealously acclaiming peace at any price, refuses to countenance the price of even economic force for the safeguarding of peace.

Exchange Of Favors?

The newly elected head of the American Legion, Commander Murphy, seeks the cooperation of the American Federation of Labor in a drive against Communists. If the A. F. of L. should prove receptive to this offer of aid, will organized labor be sufficiently grateful to make a return payment to the legion, pledging its support in the campaign to secure passage of a bonus bill?

If the two organizations having most powerful and determined lobbies at work in the Nation's Capital should agree to combine forces, they would present a formidable front, capable of striking terror into the souls of timorous Congressmen. The chances of passing a bonus bill would certainly be improved, regardless of the pressure on Communists.

The mere hint of an exchange of favors of this sort is highly disturbing. The legislative log-rolling which results in passage of legislation that is not in the interest of all the people would be a minor evil compared to the major menace of organized raids upon the national treasury conducted by lobbyists representing several million citizens bent upon obtaining special favors for themselves.

Price Disparities.

Although wholesale prices are still 19.5 per cent below the level of 1926, according to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, and although parity prices have not yet been attained for all farm products, complaints about the rise in living costs are putting Government officials on the defensive.

The reasons for the growing consumer unrest, which in some instances has led to local buyers' strikes, are not discernible from a superficial examination of price data. Although the wholesale price index for the week ended October 5 is close to the highest point reached since the upward movement began in the spring of 1933, the pace of the advance has perceptibly slackened. The rise during the past twelve months amounts to only 5.1 per cent, contrasted with a gain of 35 per cent from the depression low. Fears that the current upturn may be inflationary in origin lose much of their force in view of the fact that the increases of the past year are attributable to higher prices for farm products and foodstuffs, with all other commodities showing an average increase of only one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Furthermore, there is not much statistical evidence to support complaints of high living costs. To be sure, retail food prices have advanced 37 per cent since the spring of 1933, but at that time they were abnormally depressed. With any general business upturn, a sharp recovery was to have been anticipated. Despite a moderate rise during the past year, official and unofficial living cost indices are still below the level of 1931 and far below that of 1930.

Consumer resentment cannot be attributed, therefore, to the actual increases in prices charged for articles of necessity. It centers, rather, upon the conditions under which increases have occurred and to their uneven and erratic character. The extraordinarily rapid rise in retail prices of meat products, especially pork, for example, has brought vigorous protests.

If these higher food prices had come about in a "natural" way, with expanding employment and larger earnings for the industrial population, there would be no legitimate excuse for grumbling about adjustments that tend to correct the disparity between the prices of farm products and other commodities. Increases in food prices, however, bear heavily upon the industrial population when millions are still unemployed. Moreover, they are resented when they are deliberately sought by means of monetary manipulation and arbitrary restriction of output, as under the AAA.

It is true that devaluation of the dollar has had only a limited price-raising effect on commodities entering into our import and export trade, while the drought has been more potent than the AAA in making foodstuffs dear. Nevertheless, artificial devices have played a part—even if a subordinate part—in raising prices. Then, too, a large proportion of the processing taxes collected by the Government has been levied upon foodstuffs and shifted to consumers. With a large percentage of the population on relief rolls or drawing work-relief pay, it is, therefore, easy to find an explanation for the profound dissatisfaction engendered by once-longed-for advances.

Walton H. Hamilton, director of the consumer division of NRA, says that his organization is not interested in "batting down prices at all costs," but is concerned with "bringing the price in conformity with the lowest necessary cost, in seeing that inefficiency and fruitless arbitrary restrictions are not subsidized."

In thus stating the objective, this NRA official has directed attention to the basic weakness of the Administration's price policies. It has tried to raise the prices of certain commodities according to artificial formulas, with too little regard for the importance of reducing costs, increasing output and attracting demand at lower prices. In other words, the consumer has been the forgotten man, whose complaints are now becoming too loud to be ignored.

Regained Poise.

The most welcome aspect of the decision of New Jersey's Court of Errors and Appeals is that it lifts the Hauptmann case out of the degenerate atmosphere in which it was left by the trial court. Proceedings which assumed the outward characteristics of a carnival have been reduced to their legal essence. In spite of the shameless debasement of this trial by the sensation mongers, the higher tribunal has found in the evidence overwhelming support for the jury's verdict of guilty.

It will be a long time before the country can forget the gross spectacle of the Flemington trial. To some extent, however, the Supreme Court of New Jersey has stripped the Hauptmann case of its sadistic taint. The higher court marshaled the evidence with the cool logic, the dispassionate judgment, and the complete impartiality essential to the dignity of the law. The effect is to make the case against the convicted man much more impregnable.

Thirteen judges joined in the unanimous opinion that Hauptmann was granted a fair trial, in spite of its melodramatic frills, and that the evidence leads "inescapably" to the verdict of guilty. The character of this opinion leaves no doubt that the case was scrutinized with the utmost care. Although defense attorneys may be expected to utilize every possible avenue of escape from the death sentence, the opinion carries an element of finality that will not easily be shaken.

New Jersey is to be congratulated on thus restoring her poise. If the case is handled in the same impressive manner from this point forward, the bestial aspects of the whole sordid business will be the sooner forgotten.

The Missing Safeguard.

In a significant address before the American Management Association, Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, serves warning that the stock market offers an especially inviting field for inflationary developments.

The principal source of danger, however, lies, as Mr. Gay says, "entirely outside the mechanism of the Stock Exchange. It is to be found in the banking situation which is characterized by unprecedentedly low money rates and by the greatest surplus reserves ever recorded." The stock market, in short, is only one of the possible avenues through which idle, cheap funds may find an outlet and bring an inflationary rise in prices of securities or commodities. This opinion was yesterday confirmed by James M. Landis, new chairman of the SEC, who openly expresses doubt as to the ability of the commission to check an inflationary market boom.

Mr. Gay enumerates various safeguards which might be employed to avert a runaway inflationary movement, placing special emphasis upon those provisions of the banking laws designed to control the financing of security dealings. He also mentioned the police powers of the SEC, thus drawing from Mr. Landis a warning against exaggerating the commission's effectiveness as an anti-inflationary safeguard.

As both men would doubtless agree, the major menace presented by the existing volume of excess reserve calls for general remedies of a different type. Mr. Gay, for example, notes that the banking act of 1935 empowers the Federal Reserve Board of Governors under certain conditions to raise reserve requirements 100 per cent. Such action would practically eliminate existing excess reserves. Or the board might, under its power to regulate open-market operations, order the Reserve banks to sell their holdings of Government securities. By such means, it would also be possible to "mop up" surplus reserves.

Despite the extensive powers of credit control vested in the reconstituted and presumably more independent board of governors, it would be practically impossible to resort to such drastic methods so long as the Government is compelled to finance budgetary deficits. The Reserve banks can not dispose of outstanding Government issues in the open market while the Treasury is under the necessity of borrowing more money. Neither can the member banks, upon whom the Treasury must depend in large part as an outlet for new issues, be deprived of the surplus funds which enable them to buy.

In short, the control of the money market goes deeper even than Federal Reserve policy. Sound fiscal policies are the indispensable safeguards against a continuous piling up of those excess reserves which are largely a result of deficit financing. Neither banking laws nor administrative machinery for regulating speculative transactions are an effective defense against inflation so long as the budget remains unbalanced.

The Tenth Decade.

As the town of Annapolis takes down its bunting, and the United States Naval Academy embarks on its ninety-first year this morning, it is only natural that the country should reflect for a moment on the difficult educational role so skillfully filled by the venerable institution on the banks of the Severn.

To an extent too seldom appreciated, the academy has an assignment more exacting than that of any other institute of higher learning. Not only must it turn out men well schooled in the naval sciences, but also men who are successful leaders of their fellows. With the ever-increasing complexity of modern naval equipment and strategy, the first responsibility presents a problem of itself. To add to this the requirement that midshipmen have the cultural equipment of college graduates, and show ability to develop the faculty of command, more than doubles the training problem.

Quarterdeck manners and a knowledge of winds and currents no longer suffice to make a naval officer. Yet, in the quick transition from the days of sail to the days of mechanized ships, the Naval Academy has moved smoothly abreast of the times and doubtless will continue to do so.

This world will never have permanent peace as long as there remain (a) selfishness and (b) something left worth fighting for.

N. J. Can't Stand Its Sales Tax.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

After four months of the retail sales tax New Jersey appears ready and eager to get rid of it.

Both Republican and Democratic parties have gone on record for repeal. The State Legislature is expected to lose no time at its coming session in removing it from the statute books, relieving the people of an unfair and unwanted extra demand on their pocketbooks.

Action of the two major parties removes the sales tax as a political issue in the election campaign. In indorsing repeal, the Republicans are removing a cause of internal dissension within their ranks and making for a united party at a time when disunion would be dangerous.

The tax has been widely unpopular from the start. Pennsylvania, which was threatened with a similar levy for a time early this year until popular protest drove it to cover, can learn a lesson from New Jersey's experiences and continue to steer a course far away from the sales tax.

A Blast From "Bophocles"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How difficult to compete with far-flung voices of those constantly crying that "Am I my brother's keeper?" is meant for Sunday school precepts and adolescent day dreams unpunctured by contact with worldly aims. A vain hope that the effective voice of this great and generous Nation may be moved in active acclaim of idealism backed by force or potential force.

Whether or not we entered the last war primarily to save democracy or Wall street, the truth is clear that our four million doughboys were fired with an unselfish zeal, regardless of baser motives which may have fired that zeal. We did go to war for a principle; we did help to win that war; we did suggest, frame and fight for the League of Nations; we did "take a trimming" of our own creation and, having burned our fingers in our own fire, we are now wary and listen complacently to baser motives.

* * * *

Not one person in a million but believes that we should stay out of European affairs; that our best interests are served by "staying at home" and by having nothing whatever to do with the present Italo-Ethiopian dispute. The President's recent neutrality proclamation expressing a new principle of "trade at your own risk" is an excellent step in the right direction, in so far as limiting the rights of neutrals is concerned and minimizing our chances of becoming embroiled to protect American "rights." Yet how many of us will be complacent if a British ship sequesters an American ship carrying cotton, wheat, textiles, mules or lumber to Italy? Further, how many will cry for our ancient right to the freedom of the seas as a cloak for making profits out of the troubles of others? How much better to stop the whole danger now by telling the League and Mussolini that we will step in with our might to give effect to the League Covenant we helped to frame. By so doing Mussolini will know that his rampage is doomed and our cost will be a few definite words, whereas now we may be committing ourselves to a cost of an indefinite number of lives and incalculable wealth! By going in we help out, and by helping out we go in, is a no less true paradox than "starvation in the midst of plenty."

* * * *

How many people believe that:

1. The world chaos is almost directly due to the abandonment by the United States of its child, the League of Nations?

2. The trade barriers and collapse of currencies were created and caused by the United States?

3. That the followers of Henry Cabot Lodge by their insularity paved the way, in some measure, to the present war?

4. The war debts should not be paid and that their non-payment will lead to understanding and increased chances of prosperity?

5. That not a shot would be fired or a life lost if the United States would:

(a) Support England in its demand for sanctions, military, against Italy.

(b) Send its fleet to the Mediterranean.

(c) Tell Mussolini to go home and take his misnamed Roman legions with him.

(d) Take its place in the League of Nations and back it with its might.

The answer: probably 12,000,000 people out of 120,000,000 or 10 per cent.

How many people believe that:

1. The United States would receive a square deal as a member of the World Court and the League?

2. Universal peace can be imposed by the mere presence of the United States on the League Council in the League Assembly?

The answer: the same 10 per cent.

* * * *

Question: Are the 90 per cent or the 10 per cent right?

Answer: History, if it teaches anything, shows that the majority is generally wrong. Majority means mediocrity and the fault of democracy is thus exposed. Jesus, Confucius, Gandhi and all other spiritual leaders spoke—single voices in a wilderness of majority dissenters—but they were right. Instead the majority chose the rule of selfishness, self-interest, self-concern, self-destruction.

Our President appeals to the majority and to its baser motives, regardless of grandiose words of "more abundant life" and glittering generalities. He knows the mob succumbs to those motives but he should know that they lead only to destruction regardless of plagiarized appeals to the clergy as the keepers of the secular conscience.

What an opportunity he has now to be a true leader, backing spiritual discernment with the force of right! What a chance really to throw "the money changers out of the temple!" The setting is perfect! An underdog set upon by an overdog in a group of dogs who have agreed not to fight! All the elements of American sportsmanship and leadership are there and now we prate about neutrality even though our new neutrality is a mild sanction against Italy! Neutrality in the face of despicable bullying is cowardice! Our neutrality will lead to the very chaos we wish to avoid! Our heritage will be isolation, pique, anger, resentment and war without friends!

No one knows what the United States will do next; it has no definite policy, no principle, no effective idealism, no sportsmanship, and if possible, less statesmanship.

* * * *

Yes, I know all your answers: We won the war. "They hired the money." Look what we got, etc., etc.

"We won the war" in the same way that a new and fresh football team "going in" in the fourth quarter wins a game from a team that has fought for three killing quarters! "Then hired the money." Hell, we made all the profits out of the war and were too dumb to keep them here! Perhaps our motives in going in "boomeranged" on us in our inability to keep our ill-gotten gains. "Look what we got." Just what we deserved. We took a tired world to the top of the mountain, showed it the Promised Land, and then ran away. In our despicable failure to carry through on the League of Nations, we left the world in exactly the same position that Mussolini's 300,000 soldiers in or near Ethiopia would be in if:

(a) The Suez Canal were closed.

(b) The Straits of Gibraltar were closed.

(c) Italy was starved out.

* * * *

Yes, I'm crazy—no one believes this, not even the 12,000,000, but "look at the record" of our bright isolationists, our Hiram Johnsons, our Hearsts, our Lodges, etc.:

1. We made war profits—we lost them. We were either dumb or foolish or "they" were too smart for us. In any event, a splendid picture.

2. We are the richest people on earth with all the gold, all the silver, all the oil, all the cereals, all the iron, all the livestock—and—all the unemployed, all the grief, all the deficit, all the foolishness, all the "saps." (The word "all" is here used to mean "more than any other nation.")

3. We are basically the most generous, liberal, unselfish and kind people on earth and follow blindly the "dumbest" politicians, the wildest theorists, the "glibbest" talkers and the result is:

1. Killed pigs, imported wheat and corn and livestock.

2. Demoralized business, industry, schools, citizenry.

3. Broken promises, repudiated bonds, meaningless contracts.

4. Boondoggling.

5. Deficits.

* * * *

A drunkard never gets hurt! God takes care of children! How drunk, how childish we are, but God must soon be tired. Let's go back to lost causes, the God in the machine—not Democrats or Republicans but to leaders, administrators, legislators and professors, regardless of political color, who:

1. Love the truth.

2. Love their neighbors and help them whether Ethiopians, Chinese, Frenchmen, Englishmen, or Swedes.

3. Believe in work, thrift, economy and party platforms.

4. Are trustees for the world of the goods of the world which happen to be in the United States. God doesn't even know of a separate United States.

5. Believe that each man has an inalienable right to the pursuit of happiness and goods in his own way unless he "runs smack against" the motto of, I think Justinian, who said "So use your own goods as not to harm others," but he did say "your own goods."

Listen, F. D.: America elected you—America loved your heart at first, it loved your words and hung on your promises—it now doubts your head, it fears your bungling, it remembers your broken promises, it suffers your smugness, it pays your bills, it reads "no hits, no runs, all errors," but it thinks, it acts, whether in 1936 or 1940, and it now wonders if you will do the "big thing" for the world, for America, for humanity, by:

Saving the League.

Stabilizing the currencies.

Restoring trade, confidence, self-respect.

Respecting liberty—or do the expedient thing by:

Getting out the vote.

Little did Sir Walter Raleigh dream that the uninspiring tubers he showed to Queen Elizabeth would be of greater value to the world than all the gold and silver of the Americas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was at the Belasco Theater today and sat through three performances. In the newsreels was the President's address at Fremont to the farmers. I mention this because it is the only time I ever was in a theater when not even one person applauded when the President appeared.

OBSERVER.

Washington, Oct. 9.

The Post Impressionist

M. Tardieu and A Fiery Cross.

Post Office, Friday.

THIS Column has a high opinion of that book-mill which, signing itself "The Unofficial Observer," brought its first provocative products to market as "The New Dealers" in The Washington Post. Nevertheless, a high opinion needn't imply unqualified endorsement of opinions: we are compelled to dissent from sundry declarations made in the Observer's clever volume published by Simon and Schuster "only yesterday."

* * *

After all, the scene of "Our Lords and Masters" is essentially Europe. And Europe was for many years pleasantly situated in the Post-Impressionist's own back yard.

We could correct, or at least supplement, this large volume on a large number of points: could, but won't. We confine ourselves to two instances, both Gallic.

We know that the Observer has omitted some most significant data "relative to" Col. de la Rocque, leader of what is called French Fascism. We simply can't accept a a list of 25 worlds-rulers—"titans of truly sovereign rank"—which includes Andre Tardieu.

The Observer depicts M. Tardieu as saturnine and mighty: "the most forceful figure in French politics," with M. Laval for his "front-office man. Either as prime minister or as a member of the government," Tardieu, the Observer assures us, rules France.

Well, Tardieu did become premier when Briand's cabinet fell in the midautumn of '29—but held that puissant post for a few months only. He failed, as our sporting friends would put it, to pull off a comeback "after the assassination of President Doumer"—failed again when, a little later, so many other outs became ins under cover of the Stavisky scandal's smoke screen.

Our unofficial friend seeks to support his contention that Tardieu is an uncrowned king by describing him as the "henchman" of French Big Business in general, of the French steel trust in particular. But, even if this description is firmly founded—even in these glorious days of equal opportunity, when European dictatorships are within the reach of "all sorts and conditions of men"—there is still an appreciable distance between the steel collar of a henchman and the very visible orb and scepter of an uncrowned king.

The fact is that this immaculately garbed Tardieu—whom many Washingtonians will recall as an excellent host when he served here as his country's wartime High Commissioner—did not, in the sense implied by the Observer, "join the Clemenceau group" during that conflict. He went to political school to the Tiger.

And the fact is that Tardieu has a sense of humor more American than French. It frequently runs away with him—sometimes to his hurt, as, for instance, Nicholas Titulescu of Rumania could testify. It is a bit mordant; and, if there is one sort of fun Tardieu enjoys more than another, it is the sort calculated to impress less sophisticated persons with the belief that he is a bold, bad man.

Of course, "the mills of the gods grind slowly," but he is 59. If he is ever going to join the mundane dictatorial dieties, he must effect a slight alteration in his name—not Tardieu, but Le Dieuplustard.

* * *

Moreover, the Post-Impressionist is convinced that, studying the Croix de Feu, our observant friend has substituted a micrafying-glass for a magnifying lens.

This organization may indeed have been fostered by the French "bankers and industrialists to counteract" Leon Blum's intransigent Socialists. Its lack of a declared program may also suggest that it is an embryo Fascist movement: most Fascists begin as vigilantes. At present, too, these vigilantes are suffering from a preoccupation with the Blum Socialists so great that, like the Blum Socialists' preoccupation with the Croix de Feu, it leaves them little for definitive action. Yet, in the hands of Col. de la Rocque—pupil of colonizer Lyautey and World War warrior—it was admittedly gaining 400 recruits a day no longer ago than last January, and it has become far more than "a wistful parody of Hitler's and Mussolini's youthful hordes of shirted enthusiasts."

Says the Observer:

"De la Rocque takes pride in the fact that the Croix de Feu has no program except national and individual regeneration by force of character." He opposes both restoration of the monarchy and the Red Flag, but believes that progress is toward the left rather than the right." . . .

* * *

Hasn't the Observer heard that Col. de la Rocque's brother is secretary of the Royalists' candidate for the throne of France?

What Teachers Didn't Say.

New York, October 10.

YOU may say that it is a political announcement of no great importance, but, for whatever it may be worth, I have definitely decided not to run for the office of President of the United States next year or at any future time. Perhaps a greater stir would be caused if Herbert Hoover or Gov. Landon of Kansas were to make the same declaration. Nevertheless, it is my feeling that, with the field so badly cluttered by candidacies, any eligible man who decides that he does not choose to run owes it to his fellow citizens to say so in so many words. Thus, by elimination, it would be possible to determine who the candidates are and avoid some confusion.

I have not yet decided whom I will support, but I can say pretty definitely that it will not be Roosevelt, because I think he has taken as much punishment as any one man should on behalf of his fellow citizens. I may support Mr. Hoover out of personal spite. Feeling as I do about him, I wouldn't lift a hand to defeat him and thus spare him four years more of the headaches which he suffered when he had the job before.

* * * *

YOU may say that I have a great nerve to speak thus about whom I will support and whom I will oppose. But if a politician or a publisher may say that he supports this man or opposes that one why shouldn't a man who runs a store on the corner or a column in the papers? In this great, free democracy, where one man's vote is as important as another's, if I announce that I have thrown my support to Herbert Hoover isn't that as important as a similar announcement by Henry Ford? Or am I just being naive again?

It will be heresy, but the job of President is much less attractive now than it seemed back in the days when the school teacher looked out over the shiny, freckled, buck-toothed faces of the little pests who sat in straight, orderly rooms and said, "A future President of the United States may be sitting among you." True, she did not go into particulars, but there was something in her manner of saying this which suggested the presidency was the best job in the American republic. The first Roosevelt was President at the time, and he was a good press agent for the office. He was so strenuous and truculent that he imparted to the position an appearance of great wisdom and power. It seemed to us that if a man was President of the United States the people all would respect and fear him, and there was no suggestion that he might have severe trials to compensate his honors.

Since that time several Presidents have come and gone who did not seem to enjoy their work very much. Taft was depicted as a jovial, fat man who laughed off his problems, but those were horse-and-buggy days, and Mr. Taft didn't have much to do. He had no war to fight or keep out of and no panic. All I can recall of his presidency was that he ate some 'possum once down in Georgia, which was a form of baby-kissing, and overflowed his bathtub in some hotel on the road, causing a complaint by the guest on the floor below.

* * * *

BUT Mr. Wilson made very heavy weather of it and died as much from overwork as from other causes, and it was said that his passing was hastened by the physical strain of hours of handshaking and worry over the mischief which his friends had wrought. Mr. Coolidge did not seem to enjoy being President, and if there ever was a living picture of worry, woe and suffering in public office it was Mr. Hoover. Fr. Frank Roosevelt wears a wide smile, but I think it is a definite muscular action rather than the natural beaming of inward pleasure, and I wouldn't have his job under his conditions of service at any salary. He hired out as an executive to run a big business, and he has found that a President is expected to stand for criticism of the most personal sort and like it.

When a man is elected President, and even when he is running for a nomination, he discovers that the people gossip about him and his wife and children, if any, and make up jokes about them which are told around the saloons and bridge tables. Some of the jokes which have been told about Presidents and members of their families in my time have been distinctly dirty humor; but there is no sportsmanship in such matters, and people blab them around and consider them great fun.

* * * *

THE school teacher never told us about this phase of the presidency. Neither did she warn us that a man in the White House may have to submit to the most dishonest and malignant abuse from political opponents, even though his policies at that very moment may be saving the country from some great peril. I think many of the people who are fighting Mr. Roosevelt now are incapable of sound judgment on his Administration. They hate him so furiously that they see pinwheels before their eyes at the mere mention of his name. It was the same as to Mr. Hoover and Mr. Wilson.

The school teacher also forgot to tell us how a man goes about getting a nomination for the presidency. Perhaps she didn't even know how delegates are obtained and what sort of people a man must make deals with in order to win a nomination.

But experience has filled in the chinks, and that is why one eligible man has decided to withdraw from the race.

The Presidency! You may have it.

Lope De Vega

By William Lyon Phelps

THEY have been celebrating in Spain his year the three hundredth anniversary of the death of their famous dramatist Lope de Vega; and no wonder, for he belongs to the immortals—a fact universally recognized when he was alive. The London Times in an interesting article on the tercentenary, says: "On Tuesday, August 28, 1635, the sun-tortured streets of Madrid witnessed a funeral such as perhaps never before or since has been accorded to a man of letters."

* * * *

Entirely apart from the excellence of his work and its prodigious influence on literature and the stage, the salient fact about Lope de Vega is the speed with which he wrote. I wonder if he holds the world's record. The London Times puts it in this way: "He composed three-act plays in verse at an average of two plays every three weeks during 60 years."

He himself said, "More than a hundred of my comrades have taken only 24 hours to pass from my brain to the boards of the theater." It is a wonder he did not get writer's cramp.

In addition to this gigantic play-production, he wrote a large number of epic poems, over 10,000 lines for each.

Collapse Of Silver Program

Although Purchase Act Calls For Four-To-One Ratio Between Gold And Silver Stocks, Vast Influx Of Yellow Metal Causes Greater Disproportion Than Ever.

By Herbert M. Bratter.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE American silver-purchase program has been forced to swim upstream from its very inception in June, 1934. It has had to contend with convincing criticism and ridicule at home and abroad, while the more ardent advocates of the silver purchase act have been hoping against hope that it would bear out at least some of their contentions. The best that can be said on that score is that many economic and financial developments have been taking place simultaneously, to the confusion and bewilderment of the citizen who would like to form an unprejudiced opinion on silver. Secondly, a huge inflow of gold has characterized recent months, making it necessary to buy ever-increasing quantities of silver in order to progress toward the goal of the silver purchase act.

This is the way it works out: Our monetary stock of gold is being constantly augmented by imports, releases of "earmarked" gold heretofore held here in the names of foreign banks, and the new production of American mines. Our industries and arts do not consume more than a small fraction of the gold from the three sources mentioned. The rest all goes to increase our Government-treasured hoard of the yellow metal.

The silver law enacted in June, 1934, has as its chief provision that the Government buy enough silver to make the monetary stock of silver equal to one-fourth of the total monetary value of both the gold and silver stocks. The degree to which this is being attained is measured by considering gold as worth $35 per ounce, and silver—regardless of the market price—as being worth $1.29 plus per ounce. Since our total stock of gold has been growing hand over fist—due largely to our having depreciated and undervalued the dollar in the exchange markets by our "devaluation" policy—it is obvious that "one-fourth of the total monetary value of both gold and silver" has been an ever-increasing quantity. The simplest figures will serve to illustrate this fact.

* * * *

IN 1934, between June 1 and December 31, our monetary stock of gold increased from $7,779,000,000 to $8,238,000,000, or $459,000,000. In the first six months of 1935 our gold stock similarly gained about $877,000,000. This was a net 13-month total of approximately $1,336,000,000. Our net imports of silver during the same 13-month period had a market (not "monetary") value of $156,555,000

In the first six months of 1935 the market value of our gold stock increase from imports and release from earmark was ten times the market value of our net silver imports. Even when one allows for revaluation of the silver at $1.29 per ounce in the sense of the silver purchase act mentioned above, the attainment of silver-gold symmetallism is still far off.

How the silver program has been working out from the above standpoint is further illustrated by the following summary figures, based upon Treasury statements. In these figures, unlike those above, account has been taken of changes in our total monetary stock of gold (not simply net imports), and the monetary stock of silver has been calculated at $1.29 per ounce, as is necessary under the provision of the silver purchase act. Since the figures are only infrequently and irregularly published by the Treasury, the picture can be shown only as of certain dates.

* * * *

ON June 30, 1934, some 1,331,000,000 ounces of silver were needed to carry out the silver purchase act of 1934. Between June 30, 1934, and March 29, 1935, the Treasury's purchases of foreign American, and "nationalized" silver resulted in a net increase in the weight of our monetary stock of silver from approximately 695,000,000 ounces to 1,113,000,000 ounces. The "monetary value" correspondingly mounted from $898,000,000 to $1,445,000,000.

On March 29, 1935, there still remained to be bought 1,090,197,000 ounces of silver. By the end of last July our total silver accumulations exceeded 471,900,000 ounces and our monetary stock of silver 1,166,550,000 ounces. The monetary value of our silver stock had been increased from $1,445,000,000 to $1,508,356,000. Yet at the end of the four-month period ended July 31 we still had to buy 100,000,000 ounces more than had remained to be purchased on March 29. On March 29 we required 1,090,197,000 ounces more, and on July 31, 1935, 1,190,625,000 ounces!

In August our imports of silver on Government and private account were valued at $30,820,000, and exports at $2,009,000. Our gold stock, also, continued to increase, net imports recorded by the customs amounting to almost $46,000,000 in that month. In September the inflow of gold was marked, the total imports being $156,804,830, and exports only $86,054. Silver imports in September were $45,689,000, and exports, $1,472,000.

* * * *

THE gold inflow has come to assume a dominant position in our balance of international payments. The $802,000,000, net, imported in the first half of 1935 compares with gross merchandise exports of $1,024,000,000 and a net merchandise export balance of only $29,000,000. The present inward movement of gold is in large part attributable to capital movements arising out of investment of foreign funds, repatriation of foreign securities, and in some measure simple flight of capital from the uncertainties of Europe.

Whatever its causes, the fact stands out that our silver purchase act cannot be justified on the grounds that it is adding silver to an inadequate monetary base of gold. Such a purpose motivated some of those who advocated the act, despite the fact that previous devaluation of the dollar had added $2,800,000,000 to the value of our gold stock. Yet about the only thing that can now be said in defense of our silver purchases is that they tend mildly to counteract the potential effects of the large gold inflow by keeping out some gold. In other words, it is held, if we took less silver we would be receiving even more gold than we now are, the addition of which gold to our excess monetary reserves would mean potentially more ultimate inflation than our present bloated gold stock makes possible.

There are, however, other ways to keep out foreign gold. Trade agreements, general tariff concessions and the like would make it possible for foreigners to pay us in goods instead of bullion, and would also do much to revive world trade and prosperity. After all, most of our imported silver has come from China—which suffers painful deflation in the process of surrendering it—and does not come from the countries which have been supplying most of our gold imports. The latter countries have little if any silver to send us, and so do not profit by our willingness to accept silver in lieu of gold.

* * * *

IT would be different if England, France, Belgium, Germany, Argentina, etc., had silver to send us. Even then, it is far from clear that it would be the advantage of the United States to accept, at 65⅝ cents per ounce, silver which but for our Government purchases might have a market value of 25 cents per ounce.

To open our mints to the free coinage of foreign silver at 65⅝ cents per ounce as we are at present doing is simply carrying one step further the dollar-depreciating measures of 1933 and 1934, measures which failed to restore prosperity and the full inflationary effects of which are yet to be felt.

From the foregoing it follows that the one "favorable" feature of our silver policy—that it tends to minimize gold imports—is (a) contrary to the purpose of "restoring" silver as a means of expanding the monetary base; (b) only in very small degree enables any Occidental holding countries to avoid sending us gold; and (c) while cheapening our dollar in the world's only two recent silver-standard communities, China and Hong Kong, is deflationary and unwelcome there.

Don't Mention It.

No End of Books

The Best People.

WE ARE going to skip about over the world this morning, but, by a very odd coincidence, no matter where we roam in these four books of travel the respective authors thereof are going to declare and persuade us that each has found the best people on earth. Bedouins, Tahitians, Mongol Torguts, and the Irish in Ireland, all seem to be the salt of creation. Which means, of course, that all our authors possess that most necessary ingredient of the travel writer, enthusiasm.

It shines clearest and most natural in the remarkable pages of Carl R. Raswan's "Black Tents in Arabia" (Little Brown, $4)—remarkable in any man's eye because they narrate what no other traveler in Arabia, not even the great Doughty or the famous Lawrence, has been able to report. A life among the Bedouin as a Bedouin. Mr. Raswan, of German birth and part-Hungarian blood, went to Egypt a quarter-century ago and began to deal in Arabian horses. His passion for them led him among the desert tribes. Once, playing with some little Bedouin boys, he was struck in the forehead by a stone, from a sling shot, which drew blood.

Now you must understand that no law among us, not even the income tax collection, is half so well observed as the Bedouin observe the law of hospitality. The safety of a stranger and a guest is absolutely inviolable—and the little Bedouin boy who caused the accident rent his clothes and wailed: "Before the face of God I deliver myself unto you: Tell me the price of your blood!" (The blood-price of a guest is twice that of a man killed in fight—50 camels and 4 mares.) But Mr. Raswan, already wise in desert ways, replied solemnly. "This has happened according to the will of Allah. I know no other price but thy friendship." Thus he became blood-brother to the future Amir Fauz, lord of the largest of Arabia's wandering tribes, the Fuala Bedouin. And thus he was privileged to visit them 11 times in 22 years, to live among them for months, to travel and hunt and fight by their side, and to become a Rueyli chieftain himself.

Such experience, told with brilliant high-light and economy, fills these pages. For tenderness, read the touching love story of two young Bedouins, Tuema and Faris. For epic tragedy and grandeur, read of the time when drouth and hunger forced the whole tribe—35,000 people, with 7,000 tents and 350,000 camels—to migrate north into enemy country. In between lies everything from the proper eating of locusts to the cruel sport of hunting gazelles with falcon. Mr. Raswan understands as well as he sees, and he writes as well as he understands—which is to say, marvelously well. I commend this book to you, with its lagniappe of 72 pages of amazingly fine photographs.

BLESS the South Sea Islanders for preserving the illusion of the Golden Age among us! Charles J. Lipscomb is following in well-worn footsteps when he writes "Tiki: A Tahitian Adventure" (Dial Press, $2.75), but he finds today the same idyllic charm which Melville, Stevenson, Loti, O'Brien and a host of others have reported. Papeete may be commercial now, and almost too famous for the Rainbow Cocktails which Alex serves on the porch of the Tahiti Yacht Club, but the inimitable Lucie still chuckles all over her 300 pounds, the little colonial Frenchmen still argue in back dining rooms, the girls still weave blossoms in their hair and call "Iorana" in greeting, "le truck" still careens around the "broom road" with its giggling passengers, there is still torch-light fishing on the reef and swimming under mountain water falls and wild pig hunting in the back country and hilarious night-long moon-lit parties.

Young Mr. Lipscomb joined in every pursuit, picked up all the local color, and wrote of it simply and informally in "Tiki." It makes very pleasant reading indeed.

HENNING HASLUND, Danish explorer, follows up the success of last year's "Tents in Mongolia" with a new and gorgeous volume, "Men and Gods in Mongolia" (Dutton, $5). In 1927-1930, he accompanied the Sven Hedin expedition into China's hinterland, then wandered off with his own party to visit the little-known Torguts—with their 13 rulers and 100,000 tribesmen. A fine people they were, far more close than other Asiatics to the ideals and ways of thinking of the European. Mr. Haslund-Christensen came very close to them, learned their customs, songs, and magic, and brought back a wealth of fascinating material. Good scene: Haslund, arraigned before the Mongols for having accidentally shot two of their horses, turns the tables against his furious accuser by assuming the role of a "shaman" (witch-doctor), spouting Tibetan formulae and English verse, and putting the evil-eye upon the now affrighted man.

The Catholic back-bone of Ireland, in people and culture, finds a glowing interpreter in Hugh de Blacam—"Gentle Ireland" (Bruce, $2). Here, most vividly, is the green isle of St. Patrick—its present scenes, its past history and legend. Every drop of your Irish blood will shout: "Erin go bragh!"

The "best people" after all this? I guess, in a good book, we can all be pretty fine.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Lives of Great Men All Remind Us———."

("The famous duplex residence of the late President Calvin Coolidge at 21 Massasoit street, Northampton, Mass., is being transformed into a tea room and gift shop."—News item.)

Here dwelt a famous President
In sheltered privacy . . .
"And will you have one lump or two,
Please, in your cup of tea?"

This was his home through all the days
Of glory and of fame . . .
"I'll take some toast and marmalade
And Junior'll have the same!"

Within these walls the Silent One
Found rest and happiness . . .
"Dear me! I don't know what I want;
Some ham and eggs, I guess!

Here in the days when Fortune first
Began to show her smile
Cal Coolidge sat among his own . . .
"Yes, make it Southern style!"

"The Coolidge house"—this was the place—
'Twas here his boys grew up . . .
"I think I'll have some buttered rolls,
And, please, another cup!"

The news that he was governor
First reached him sitting here . . .
"I'll have some consomme, a chop,
And sliced tomatoes, dear!"

'Twas in these once-still rooms there came
The call to Washington . . .
"No mashed potatoes, if you please;
And, thanks, another bun!"

This is the hallowed "Twenty-one"
To which great mem'ries cling;
From ruler's home to public inn—
Gosh, life's a funny thing!

"The Last Days of Pompeii" Sets New Record for Spectacular Havoc on Screen

Camera Effects Are Staggering In Proportions

Show Demolition of City; Premiere Set Back Day; Amusement Jots.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Except that there is no such thing as the attainment of a final perfection in so fluid and so rapidly developing a medium as the cinema, one would feel tempted to say that the ultimate in spectacular death, destruction and disaster has been encompassed in Merian C. Cooper's production for RKO-Radio of "The Last Days of Pompeii."

In the final sequences of this free translation of the Bulwer-Lytton story occurs so stupendous a cataclysm that it leaves the senses staggered, the imagination stunned and the testimony of the senses almost unbelieved.

How such a completely realistic simulation of the demolition of a proud and haughty city of marble and stone ever was contrived is of minor consequence. It may be the sheerest photographic trickery, but there it is, thundering, crashing, colossal and complete, with Vesuvius in the background belching eternity into the faces of terror-stricken and struggling men.

It is a ghastly and magnificent spectacle, tossed upon the screen with Gargantuan recklessness as the climax of a pagan story.

It is a lamentable circumstance that the dramatic narrative which forms the picture's basis is not executed with the same mastery that characterizes the closing periods of the film's purely spectacular display.

"All New But the Title."

This story, it should be said, is not Bulwer-Lytton's except in skeleton. While the name remains intact, James Creelman and Melville Baker have fabricated a dramatic recital to suit their own needs and the camera's. It is a semi-barbaric commentary upon the birth of Christianity, with a reverential and inescapable suggestion of the compassion, the humility and the power of the Nazarene.

The subordinated movements of the story that have to do with the First Christian, his trial before Pontius Pilate, the bearing of the cross from Gethsemane through the streets of Jerusalem to Calvary and the Crucifixion are managed with consummate discretion and skill.

Never is the face or figure of the Christ revealed. At the trial, only Pontius Pilate is seen; during the bearing of the cross, only that symbol of supreme sacrifice is visible above the heads of the milling, swarming mob; on Calvary, three distant crosses are pictured miles away, silhouetted against a fading sky. Nothing more.

But here are the implications of the greatest drama the world has known. The chief concerns of "The Last Days of Pompeii's" major movement are trivial and trashy in comparison. Furthermore, while coherent and orderly enough in progression, they are loosely knit and unproductive of that sense of inevitability that makes for dramatic verity and conviction.

Rathbone Able Pilate.

As one of the principal characters in the play, Pontius Pilate, extremely well played by Basil Rathbone, the best actor in the cast by unnumbered leagues, is made an amiable mofal weakling who rendered his tragic verdict against his better judgment as a sop to mob psychology which he had not the courage to combat.

But it is his friend, of their earlier horse-thieving and gold-pillaging days, who is the chief figure in the tale—Marcus, the former gladiator, turned slave-trader, financier and money lord of Pompeii. Preston Foster, it seemed to me at Manager Hardie Meakin's matutinal preview Tuesday midnight, realized only a fraction of the potentialities of this exhausting, but fruitful role.

It is no part of the present intention, however, here and now to set down a comprehensive review of "The Last Days of Pompeii's" far-flung canvas. It was the original purpose of these remarks merely to plant the idea in the reader's mind that here is sensationalism run wild, when Vesuvius goes into action—so wild that Cecil B. De Mille's prodigious battle scenes and horrendous climaxes seem like gentle, little kindergarten games in comparison.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" will follow Edward Arnold in "Diamond Jim" on the screen at RKO-Keith's. The exact day of its opening has not as yet been determined, Mr. Brady and his pure carbon deposits are doing that well!

The Columbia Players this year are enjoying their usual quota of romance as well as drama. Their record, even this early in the season, is three weddings in four months.

In July, the retiring president of the Players, Dorothea Lewis, married the newly elected president, Robert M. Miller. One member of the board of governors is being married this Saturday, October 12. Another is to be married on Thursday, October 17, to one of the most important members of the Players' technical staff.

Several seasons ago, Orris Holland, director, met Miss Iva Davis, then treasurer of the group, at a rehearsal. Soon they were married. And Actor S. Allen Foster of the playing ensemble was married that same year at the home of another member of the group and postponed his honeymoon to England to take part in the organization's production of "Holiday."

There are said to be a number of other Columbia "couples"—so many, in fact, that a special ruling has had to be made about husband-and-wife dues.

Addenda.

"Pride and Prejudice," Max Gordon's production of Helen Jerome's dramatization of the novel by Jane Austen, originally announced to open at the National on Monday night, October 21, will not open until Tuesday night, October 22, says an authoritative voice in Mr. Gordon's behalf over the phone . . . Seven performances for the week . . . Five nights and matinees Wednesday and Saturday . . . The "March of Time" broadcast over station WJSV last night at 10:30 carried a dramatization of the New York premiere of Max Reinhardt's production for Warner Brothers of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" . . . At $11 per orchestra seat at the Hollywood Theater . . . Come nice notes to the drama desk thanking us for having told the truth about certain incidents surrounding Martin Quigley's twentieth anniversary as publisher of the foremost trade journal of the motion picture industry and J. Harold Murray's suave and finely sung performance in "Venus in Silk," current at the National . . . The truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help me Sol Rosenblatt . . . Hats off to Conny Ryan, straight man with the "Everything Goes" company at the Gayety . . . He pronounces "Terpsichore" correctly in four syllables, instead of the varieties' customary three—as in "apple" . . . You don't get the "apple"?

A Shakespeare Tragedy Heads New Playbills

Miss Cornell Will Present Her Juliet at National; Next Week's Programs.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

William Shakespeare's great love tragedy, "Romeo and Juliet," will be presented by Katharine Cornell in the National Theater for one week only, beginning next Monday night, October 14, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The production to be seen here is the one that established new records for Shakespeare in New York last winter and introduced Miss Cornell in a classic role.

Florence Reed, whose career in the American theater is notable, appears as the Nurse, while two prominent London actors—Ralph Richardson, as Mercutio, and Maurice Evans, as Romeo—make their American debuts here. Charles Waldron, well remembered as the autocratic father in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," acts Friar Lawrence. Assisting these players are Irby Marshal, Charles Dalton, Alice John, Irving Morrow, David Vivian, Reynolds Evans and a large supporting company.

Guthrie McClintic directed the play. Settings are by Jo Mielziner. Paul Nordoff composed the music, and Martha Graham arranged the dances. Playgoers are urged to note that the curtain rises promptly at 8:15 at nights and at 2:15 at matinees.

* * * *

Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor, Una Merkel, Sid Silvers, June Knight, Buddy and Vilma Ebsen, Nick Long, jr., Frances Langford, Harry Stockwell and Robert Wildhack are the principals to be seen on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow, in Metro-Goldwyn Mayer's "Broadway Melody of 1936." In this group are to be found some of the most popular comedians, singers and dancers known to stage, screen and radio. Eleanor Powell's work in this film has stamped her as the sensational "find" of the year. "Football Teamwork," a gridiron short subject; "Mexico," a Metro oddity reel, and the Metrotone News will complete the bill.

* * * *

"Shipmates Forever," the Warner Brothers production filmed in large part at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis last June, will be the screen feature at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler in the co-stellar roles. This is to the Navy what "Flirtation Walk," a story of West Point, was to the Army. Lewis Stone, Ross Alexander, Johnny Arledge, Eddie Acuff and numerous others are importantly cast, supported, of course, by the whole personnel and Middie Corps of the Academy. On the stage Freddy Martin and His Radio Orchestra will share headline honors with Roy Smeck, "wizard of the strings." The program will be rounded out by Newsreel and orchestra under C. Frederick Clark.

Arthur Godfrey and Arch MacDonald, two of Washington's best-known radio personalities, aided and abetted by a notable crew of local and imported artists, will star in a jubilee stage revue at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Art Godfrey will have his band and all "the little Godfreys" with him, and Arch MacDonald daily will introduce some of the outstanding figures in the world of sport; Nell Kelly, dancing comedienne; Ray Sax, wizard of that instrument; Tom and Betty Wonder, dancers, and Robert MacDonald, barytone, with Annette Ames. The screen feature, "Here's to Romance," will introduce Nino Martini, operatic tenor, as star, supported by Genevieve Tobin, Reginald Denny, Dorothy Wilson, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink and a notable ensemble. Newsreel and orchestra will complete the bill.

* * * *

For the week beginning with a special, late preview showing Friday night and regular presentations on Saturday, the screen feature at the Belasco Theater will be "Born for Glory," a thrilling spectacle of the British navy in action that should hold especial interest at just this time. The principal roles are played by Barry Mackay and John Mills. The program, as usual, will be augmented by a varied list of supplementary attractions, ranging from cartoon comedy to travelogues and music reels, not omitting the new issue of the Pathe News.

* * * *

Elissa Landi will be the pictured star at the Metropolitan Theater beginning tomorrow in "Without Regret," a story of intrigue and blackmail in high society, in which she is supported by Kent Taylor, Paul Cavanagh and Frances Drake. Harold Young, director of "The Scarlet Pimpernel," made this picture as his first American production. Selected short subjects and full 15-minute Newsreel will complete the bill.

* * * *

Zane Grey's exciting story of "Wanderer of the Wastelands" will be presented in film form on the screen of the Columbia Theater as chief feature for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles are played by Dean Jagger, Gail Patrick, and Larry "Buster" Crabbe. They are supported by Benny Baker, Trixie Friganza, Monte Blue, Raymond Hatton, "Fuzzy" Knight, Anna Q. Nilsson, Al St. John, Tammany Young and others. The feature will be supplemented by an elaborate array of short-reel subjects.

* * * *

"The Fall of Pompeii," one of the most spectacular productions of recent years—concerning which something will be found in other columns on this page—will be the next attraction at RKO-Keith's Theater, following the extended engagement of Edward Arnold in the title role of "Diamond Jim." It will be supplemented by the Pathe News and other selected short subjects.

The feature at the Little Theater, Ninth street near F, today is "Three Cornered Moon," a picturization of the stage play, starring Claudette Colbert. An "Our Gang" comedy and sportreel also are shown. For tomorrow and Saturday the major attraction will be "Tarzan and His Mate," with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan, augmented by a Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy and Metro News.

Those intriguing platinum blondes, the Carroll Sisters, two of the chief adornments of burlesque, will be the stars of next week's attraction at the Gayety Theater, a new production bearing the title of "The Chianti Girls." The featured comedians in this unit are Jimmy Pinto and Matty Della, grotesque Italian comedians. A strong supporting company of comedians, singers, dancers and display artists is promised. The engagement begins with the usual Sunday matinee.

Meeting Called For Discussion Of Scout Work

Commissioners to Gather Monday at Home of Dr. Camp Stanley.

Scout commissioners of the District of Columbia Council will hold their first fall meeting Monday night at the home of Commissioner Dr. Camp Stanley, 2370 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Activities for the coming season will be discussed and suggestions received from scoutmasters and others in the field. The commissioners represent more than 20 divisions of the local council, each division made up of from five to ten troops, cub packs or senior Scout groups.

The executive board of the District of Columbia Council will hold its monthly meeting at the Cosmos Club, Tuesday, at 12:15 p. m.

The headquarters office of the Boy Scout council will move to 1727 K street northwest today. The moving of headquarters made necessary the postponement of training courses in cubbing and elements of scoutmastership which were to have started this week. These courses will begin at the new train-center: Cubbing on October 22, at 7.30 p. m., and elements on October 24. Dr. William T. McClosky, chairman of the local council training committee, is conducting the courses.

Fall Outing at Skyland.

Arrangements have been completed for the fall get-together and outing of the Scout men of the local council. Skyland has been selected as the place and the date next Saturday and Sunday. The group will go in automobiles. There will be a meeting and entertainment Saturday evening and church services Sunday morning, the return to be made after noon Sunday.

A new merit badge counselors' list is being prepared with the help of a number of scouters in the field who are recruiting troop committeemen and others to give instruction in the various merit badges.

Courts of honor and review will be held tomorrow at Hine Junior High School, Seventh and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. This court will be continued the second Saturday of each month through May, 1936. On the fourth Saturday the courts will be held at the Powell Junior High School, Hyatt place and Lamont street northwest. The next quarterly court of award will be held the first Saturday in December.

Troop 25 has resumed publication of its troop paper "The Keystone," with Kit Watson as editor.

Paul Siple to Broadcast.

Paul Siple, who represented the Boy Scouts on the two Byrd Antarctic expeditions, will broadcast over a national hook-up of the National Broadcasting Co., Wednesday, from 10:45 a. m. to noon. The subject will be "Exploration and Adventure."

The Scout Guide Service, started as an aid to the National Jamboree, which was to have been held here last summer, is being continued in the local council on a permanent basis. Training of guides is continuing under the local training committee.

Mrs. Patten Requests Divorce From Doctor

Mrs. Alva Ansley Patten, wife of Dr. William F. Patten, yesterday in the District Supreme Court filed suit for absolute divorce, charging her husband had been untrue to his marital vows, and had treated her cruelly over a period of six years.

She alleged the physician had her from their home last month and had on one occasion chased her along the streets, "frightening and humilating" her. Attorneys Jo V. Morgan and J. A. Marshall also asked the court to award Mrs. Patten the stock representing ownership of three apartments in the Parkwood, valued in excess of $40,000, which she claims she mostly paid for.

Discovery of America Commemorated Here

Commemorating the 443d anniversary of the discovery of America, Italians and Italo-Americans of the District will place a wreath at the base of the statue of Christopher Columbus in Union Station Plaza at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

The services will be under auspices of L'Arnaldo, Washington's Italian newspaper. The wreath will be deposited by William Amoroso, president of the Federazione Italiana.

Tomorrow evening Dr. Michael C. Strizzi, editor of L'Arnaldo, will deliver an address in English over Radio Station WOL, and the assistant editor, Mario Ricciardelli, will speak briefly in Italian.

5 P.M. is a test of how you FEEL

"How do I feel.... Swell!—why do you ask?"

IT is all so simple, too! That tired, run-down, exhausted feeling quite often is due to lack of a sufficiency of those precious red-blood-cells. Just build up these oxygen-carrying cells and the whole body takes on new life... food is really turned into energy and strength ...you can't help but feel and look better. S.S.S. Tonic restores deficient red-blood-cells... it also improves the appetite and digestion. It has been the nation's standby for over 100 years... and unless your case is exceptional it should help you, too. © S.S.S. Co.

Insist on S.S.S. Tonic in the blood-red cellophane-wrapped package. The big 20-oz. size is sufficient for two weeks' treatment... it's more economical.

Leaf tobacco being sold to highest bidder
United States Treasury Building
From 1900 up to 1934 the leaf tobacco used for cigarettes increased from 13,084,037 lbs. to 326,093,357 lbs.;
an increase of 2392%
It takes mild ripe tobacco to make a good cigarette.
During the year ending June 30, 1900, the Government collected from cigarette taxes
$3,969,191
For the year ending June 30, 1934, the same taxes were $350,299,442
an increase of 8725%
—a lot of money.

Cigarettes give a lot of pleasure to a lot of people.
Chesterfield
CIGARETTES
LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

More cigarettes are smoked today because more people know about them—they are better advertised.

But the main reason for the increase is that they are made better—made of better tobaccos; then again the tobaccos are blended—a blend of Domestic and Turkish tobaccos.

Chesterfield is made of mild, ripe tobaccos. Everything that science knows about is used in making it a milder and better-tasting cigarette.

We believe you will enjoy them.

Broadway

Broadway Looking Glass.

New York, Oct. 10.

S. L. ROTHAFEL (Roxy to you) received a settlement of $179,000 for his Radio City exit . . . Understand that Jimmy Walker will return here on the United States Line, with passage booked for October 24 or November 7 (Charlie Hand probably arranged it) . . . Mary Pickford is making the New York spots with a blond escort . . . Why are they repainting and conditioning the S. S. Leviathan? . . . Abner Silver is making passes at Luba Malina, Russian singer in the Joe Moss show . . . Jimmy Ritz is treating Mary Jane Frazee to blintzes at Dave's Blue Room . . . Kathryn Ray's hubby is C. J. Walker . . . Macoco, Argentine millionaire, will be back in town in February . . . Lupe Velez, after a record-breaking engagement at Buenos Aires, sailed for London to flickerize . . . The Teddy Bergmans expect Sir Jubilee Stork in April . . . Detroit Tigers can't be used as an example of moderation to American kids . . . The day after the Series, all of 'em indorsed cigarettes and whiskies . . . I've always claimed that was a he-man diet.

PICKFORD.

• • • •

Malcolm Bingay is the newspaperman who aroused Detroit to fever heat over the Tigers . . . His "Iffy" campaign attracted close to 130,000 added readers to the Free Press . . . He rates a Pulitzer Prize, because the senior Pulitzer respected above all else the circulation figures . . . Bob Topping and his Jayne Shadduck will spend part of their honeymoon in Italy . . . Five hot spots picked October 10 for openings . . . Bernie Cummings and a big show open at the Roosevelt tonight; Lucienne Boyer goes into the Versailles, and the Cafe Trouville, Through the Looking Glass and St. Regis Roof join the parade . . . Wire Walter and Rose Shirley on their birthdays . . . Chick Endor and Charlie Farrell headline the new show at Vigne de France, with Rosita and Fontana featured . . . Recommended: Pat Wilder, Southern gal in the Bob Hope vaude act . . . She has what it takes . . . Billy Koch's daughter, Lola, and Gomez (Gomez and Winona) are blazing . . . Red Rain has had hoof trouble.

• • • •

Add Water Under the Bridge:

Lillian Walker, famous screen heroine of the Pearl White era, dropped backstage to visit Dave Vine at the Roxy . . . She looks just the same, blonde and dimpled . . . She's been married for two years to Dr. Eugene Senior . . . Her favorite actress of the present crop is Kay Francis . . . Sheila Barrett will probably take the Crosby Gaige show offer . . . The former Claire Ray points out that she is now Mrs. Lyn Logan (her hubby's horses have been winning regularly at Jamaica, so maybe she'll give me a winner) Jack Denny suggests a trade name for the new beer cans: "Tin Pan Ale" . . . Vera Van has buster her engagement and will go into the Larry Schwab show, "May Wine" . . . The day Eva Puck married, her daughter was divorced . . . Ferdie Newman and Madelon Silvert are secretly married . . . Freddie Mack, Roxy musical director, and Gloria Quayle are on the Upbeat . . . Shuberts had trouble locating a downtown apartment for Sepia Josephine Baker, tenant trouble.

• • • •

Add superstitions: Al Jolson always bounces a rubber ball in his dressing room before he goes on a stage . . . Ted Lewis always keeps the first high hat he ever used on a peg in his dressing room . . . Paul Whiteman won't sign a contract unless there's a cornflower in his buttonhole . . . Blossom Seely always tears newspapers . . . Lillian Leitzel, who fell to her death from a high wire, always said a prayer before leaving the dressing room . . . Mary Small, NBC thrush, always wears her mother's ring for luck . . . Pete de Paolo, the racing driver, never drove without his baby's first pair of shoes tied to the front of the car . . . Kate Smith makes it a point to wink at the "mike" when she starts a broadcast . . . For that dough, she ought to curtsy . . . Jack Mills won't accept a song for publication if it begins to rain while he's listening to it . . . Red Nichols always gets out of a cab two doors away from a theater or broadcasting station and walks the rest of the way . . . Only performer who isn't afraid of green as a jinx color is Johnny Green . . . He always wears a green handkerchief while broadcasting . . . Jack Pearl carries so many luck tokens that he is actually weighed down on one side . . . He has pins, medals and everything else.

• • • •

George White and Carol McQuillan, of "Scandals," are building up to a terrific letdown . . . Rusty Anderson, of the same choir, and Milt Berger are feverish . . . The News' Lindy Hop champs have been booked into London . . . They sail on the Berengaria . . . Jean Gale, who was featured with the Gale Quadruplets in the last "Scandals," will be a chorus girl in this one . . . Meriam Verne will replace Sunny O'Dea in "Sketch Book" when Sunny offs-to-the-Coast . . . Louis Scherr, the dancer, not the agent, and Adele Smith are looking for a preacher . . . Emil Newman, called back to the Coast to produce "Anything Goes," will be the youngest musical director out there . . . He's the kid brother of Alfred Newman, United Artists exec . . . Town was surprised that Guy Lombardo didn't click at Gil Boag's new spot . . . It was a costly mistake on Guy's part, because he sacrificed a big commercial to take the job.

Wanderbirds To Hike Along Potomac Trail

Club Members Will Start From Rosslyn on Sunday Walk.

By Robert Shosteck.

The palisades of the Potomac will beckon the Wanderbird hikers on Sunday's walk along the riverside trail from Rosslyn to Chain Bridge, Virginia. This trip will be led by Dr. Titus Ulke.

Club members planning to go on this trip will meet at the end of the Rosslyn car line at 10:15 a. m. The hike will be 4 to 5 miles in length and will traverse a trail interrupted only in a few spots by rocky terrain. Bring lunch and a cup for water.

Follow River.

The group will follow the Lee highway out of Rosslyn for about a quarter of a mile to an asphalt road leading off to the right near a filling station. This road meanders downhill to the river, which it parallels for about half a mile. "Lorelei Rock" marks the beginning of the really scenic part of the walk. At Gulf Run, half a mile below Chain Bridge, the group will detour up to a spring in the second ravine on the left.

Several routes lead back to Chain Bridge or to the river, all well known to Dr. Ulke. The group will cross the bridge and follow the trail uphill to the carline. Those interested in a longer trip can continue along the tow path to Glen Echo.

Shop Displays Original Idea For Compacts

Latest Fad Is Bracelet With Space for Mirror and Loose Powder.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

OUR LIVES are spiced with variety these days. By ones, twos and dozens, interesting novelties pour into local shops. Each day sees another counter boasting its latest pride and joy.

Now it's a bracelet-compact, or if you prefer, compact-bracelet, since it's just as much one as the other. A fairly wide ornate band in gold or silver with antique finish has a half concealed receptacle in the middle. If you weren't on to the secret you'd think this nothing more than a bit of decoration, and you'd be terribly surprised to see that it opened to disclose a little round mirror and space for loose powder.

Just imagine the convenience of wearing your compact around your wrist and having it with you wherever you go. Incidentally, you might think a bracelet-compact combination would be a bit bulky. Not at all! Just take a look!

Varity of Knit Dresses.

If you aren't a member of the ever-increasing clan of knitters, and still prefer your golf clubs to the needles, then lend us an ear. A local store is showing lovely knit dresses (only $5.95, by the way) that look as if they were made by hand.

You should see them with their sporty turned back collars, leather belts and buttons, pleats and dozens of other up-to-the-minute fashion features. And what is unusual for such inexpensive knit dresses . . . they fit! And what's more, they aren't addicted to this all-direction stretching that makes so many economy frocks look frowsy when they're a month old.

They come in a large variety of fall colors and in numerous attractive styles.

Three-Panel Screens.

Lots of times in a room there's a dark, unattractive corner you don't know quite what to do with. Have you ever thought of the screen solution? There's something fascinating about a screen, and if you can utilize the space back of it for a closet, then it's practical too.

One downtown store has an attractive lot of three-panel screens covered with figured wallpaper. They're reasonably priced, and might be just what you need.

Efficient Powder Puffs.

Beauty specialists say that more skins are ruined by unsanitary powder puffs than almost any other way. They say that when puffs become caked with powder and dirt they have a tendency to literally grind small particles of dust into the skin, and to irritate the sensitive tissues. The result — blackheads, pimples, and other skin disorders.

One beauty salon which prides itself on its up-to-date methods, offers some "fluffy puffs" for sale. These are made from ostrich down, and are the softest things you ever felt. Powder adheres to them just enough to give a proper coating to your face, but with these you'll never have that ugly whitewashed look. They'll never irritate your skin either.

They come in several sizes and in pastel colors.

Gingham Dog on Job.

THAT GINGHAM dog who sat by the side of the calico cat is downtown now in the notions department of a local store. He's buckled down to business at last and spends his time intriguing casual shoppers with his load of darning thread, safety pins and other small sewing needs. He's traveling with quite an assorted group. You'll find him with a gingham camel, horse, scottie, and even a gingham cat—all exponents of darning threads and safety pins.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 325, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Hints Are Offered Housewives On Preparing Diet for Invalids

By Pattie Ellicott.

One of the most trying times in the routine of a homemaker is when illness has overtaken some member of her household and she must provide an adequate invalid diet for the ailing one in addition to planning the daily menus for the rest of the family.

The effects of ill-advised eating, of course, often lead to illness directly and that is why double caution is imperative in the matter of the diet for the sick person. If human beings could only learn the wisdom in properly balanced and prepared food many of the ills to which mortals are prone would vanish.

It seems hardly necessary to call the homemaker's attention to the fact all food for the sick should be served in a dainty, pleasing manner. Nothing is so fickle as the appetite of the ill.

Here are some recipes for invalid cookery from "Every Woman's Cook Book" by Mrs. Charles F. Moritz.

Beef Tea.

1 lb. thick round beef
1 scant pint cold water
Salt

Trim off all fat, skin, and gristle from meat, cut in small pieces. Put in earthenware bowl or crock. Cover with water. Cover bowl. Let stand one and one-half hours. Pour in saucepan (not tin or enamel), let come to good boil, then boil steadily (not too fast) 25 minutes. Strain into bowl. Let stand until sediment goes to bottom, then strain off clear part. Add a tiny pinch salt. Place on ice in bottle or jar until ready to serve. Will remain fresh several days. Serve hot or cold.

Orange Whip.

Whip white of one egg very stiff and dry, adding a tiny pinch salt and one teaspoon sugar while beating. Squeeze and strain juice of one large orange. Beat one tablespoon orange juice in stiff white. Pour balance of juice in thin glass and pile stiff white on top. Serve at once, ice cold.

Beauty Motif Of Fall Brides Hits New Notes

Sprays of Artificial Wheat to Be Worn as Hair Ornament.

BRIDES are discarding blushes this year for complexions of golden hue, and instead of the traditional orange blossoms in their veil, they now face the minister wearing sprays of artificial wheat stuck jauntily in their hair.

So says Miss Gail Aronton, editor of the magazine Beauty Culture and director of the Third Annual Washington Beauty and Style Show recently held at the Raleigh hotel under the auspices of Union Beauty & Barber Supply, Inc. Whether or not it is the Ethiopian influence which is making itself felt on weddings "Gail," as she is generally known, is not prepared to say, but she did state definitely that November brides will replace their usual rosy complexions with duskier hues. The spray of wheat is the newest note in bridal hair ornaments, and will be seen parading down many a church aisle this winter.

Experts Full of Tricks.

The beauty experts are full of tricks this year, Gail says. In the first place, they are coming out strong for fingernails painted black, with white tips, especially for evening wear. They go into rhapsodies on the effect on blondes particularly. Bright colors, ranging from green to crimson, are also good, they say.

No longer need women wait until nightfall to be glamorous, according to Gail, for artificial lashes are now being advocated for daytime as well as evening wear. It seems you attach them on when you dress in the morning and the effect on your employer or the gentleman who takes you out to lunch is nothing less than devastating, Gail says.

Powder Puffs Disfavored.

Their biggest jolt of the interview came when Gail casually advocated sleeping in the nude. Those who know about such things, she says, maintain that nightgowns and pyjamas seriously interfere with sleep, and since sleep makes for beauty, night dress should be done away with.

"Sleep as God made you," Gail said, "and eliminate those restless nights."

Most women think a washrag and a powder puff are two of life's greatest essentials, but to beauty experts they are just excess baggage.

"Throw them away," they chorus. "They're insanitary. Replace the washrag with cold cream and the powder puff with absorbent cotton."

Chlorine Is Urged In Washing Dishes

A dab of chlorine in the dishwater may keep the doctor away, according to Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases of the United States Department of Health.

In a report to the American Public Health Association at its recent meeting in Chicago, Dr. Cumming told of experiments made in restaurants which showed that respiratory diseases—which cause 30 to 45 per cent of American deaths—were spread to a large extent through knives, forks, spoons and plates.

History Made in Buildings Housing G. W. U. Students

The first woman trustee of George Washington University, Mrs. Joshua W. Evans, jr., also has the distinction of holding an honorary degree of doctor of education from the university. (Left) Mrs. Evans as she received the degree.

Harris & Ewing.

Interesting Facts About Section Formerly Known as Hamburg Contained in Pamphlet Written by Mrs. Jessie Fant Evans.

BEHIND the sober brick of the old buildings now occupied by George Washington University lies many an interesting tale connected with the city's early history, and the lofty rooms, which now house rows of desks and hundreds of students, once rang with the laughter and gay song of Washington's fashionables gathered here to dine and converse.

Interesting and unusual facts concerning the history of these buildings have been brought to light by Mrs. Jessie Fant Evans, the wife of Joshua Evans, vice president of the Hamilton National Bank. Mrs. Evans, who is a member of the board of trustees of George Washington University, being the first woman to serve in that capacity, is the author of a pamphlet on this subject entitled "Hamburg, the Colonial Town That Became the Seat of the George Washington University."

The college buildings occupy that part of town which in the closing days of the eighteenth century was known as Hamburg, so-called by its founder, Jacob Fink, after his home city of that name in Germany. In 1786 he laid out this tract in 287 building lots, one of which was purchased by George Washington. As the Federal City grew from a straggling, muddy village to a town of respectable size, the area which had been included in the Town of Hamburg gradually became an exclusive residential section incorporated in the city proper.

Undoubtedly the oldest residence now in the possession of the university is that occupied by the comtroller and his staff. Here for many years lived one of Washington's most colorful citizens, Gen. Maxwell VanZandt Woodhull, who, during the Civil War, was made brigadier general at the youthful age of 21.

Notables Frequented House.

In a house at 2017 G street, now known as Building M of the university, Henry Adams maintained bachelor quarters during the winter of 1869-70. Here he wrote the articles attacking and defending the political issues of the day, which were to become celebrated as masterpieces of this kind.

The classrooms and laboratories of the home economics division of the university are located in the house at 2024 G street which formerly served as Gen. Grant's headquarters during the Civil War. The beautiful mantels in the drawing rooms and dining room of this house are said to have been removed from the White House and installed here by a former tenant when the White House was remodeled during the administration of President Roosevelt.

A graduate of George Washington University, Mrs. Evans has long been active in civic and educational affairs. She has worked on the committee of many a local organization, including the Community Chest. In recognition of her contributions to civic life, her alma mater conferred upon her in 1932 the honorary degree of Doctor of Education.

Long Interested in History.

Mrs. Evans has long been interested in historical matters partly as a result of a colorful childhood. She was the first white child born at Fort Hall, Idaho, where her father, Joseph N. Fant, of Warrenton, Va., came in service to the Ross Fork Indian Reservation with his bride. She learned to speak Indian Shoshone and Bannock before she did English. Among the joys of her childhood were trips East with her parents to Virginia, where she visited relatives and imbibed knowledge of Virginia history. On the death of her father the family came to Washington. She was graduated from Eastern High School and Wilson Teachers College and then entered George Washington University.

As a teacher in Wilson Teachers College she organized the department of history and formulated its first printed outline of study. She resigned in 1914 to marry Mr. Evans.

Mothers Told How to Guard Child's Health

Steps to Avoid Digestive Troubles Should Be Started When Young.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

ONE of the chief sources of ill health in adults is constipation.

If the training of the child has been improper during the formative years constipation may prove a real handicap, and the first attack upon the problem should be made through the diet.

Children must be encouraged to eat wholesome food. In other words, eat what is set before them and "ask no questions, for conscience's sake." Green vegetables will supply sufficient fiber [cellulose] and add bulk to the intestinal contents. The feeding of artificial "roughage" is seldom advised. One must make certain that the child takes enough fluid—a half glass to a full glass of water on arising—and that he consumes a substantial breakfast.

Nothing has been said about laxatives. In fact, nothing should be said because they are artificial irritants and it is rarely necessary to call upon them for help. We must insist that the child, as soon as he can understand, shall receive as detailed instruction about going to the toilet regularly as about mouth hygiene, bathing, exercise and sleep.

Fur of Same Shade As Coat Popular

Paris.—Furs dyed to match exactly the shade of the cloth coat they trim have a prominent place in winter collections. For daytime wear, browns, blacks, deep eggplant purples and blues are favored with a trimming of short-haired furs, but for the one exception of fox.

A deep, misty slate blue promises to be particularly smart. One house shows a double-breasted coat edged in double rows of wide, stitched tucking which appear at the hem line and continue up to the wide, squared revers. Two rows of large, round blue buttons trim the front, and the belt is buckled in the same blue composition material as the buttons. Wide cuffs of baby seal, which has been dyed the same shade of slate blue, are applied an inch or so above the wrist, while the same fur makes a wide flat and squared rever just an inch smaller than the cloth rever below it.

Rugged Fabrics in Style Spotlight

Slacks Have a Definite Place in Wardrobe of Every Man.

By John Q. Alexander.

ORDINARY men, meaning you, and you and me, are always having the joy taken out of life by Exponents of the Physique Extraordinary. Having just barely survived the competition of Life Guards and other men-of-the-beach during the summer months, we are now forced to contend with the even more formidable Football Heroes. Unfortunately, these boys are adept at forward passes off as well as on the field, and if your Chosen One is anywhere within range you had best look to your laurels, if any, unless you want her to fall for the man in the silk pants and hobnail shoes.

All of which means that it behooves us to look our best at all seasons. Luckily, fall is the best time of year for looking rugged, what with tweeds and other rough stuffs being much in fashion.

Put on your old gray bonnet, with the grime and dirt on it, and decide right now to buy a new hat. There are several good new models this fall, one of the best being the modified Tyrolean type, which is equally good for business or sports wear. It has a fairly high crown and narrow brim, which may be worn turned up all around or down in the front. It is compatible with the facial features of most men, too, which is more than can be said for a good many hats.

String Gloves Are Warm.

Before you buy, look at the new stock at one downtown store. They have them in an assortment of good colors, peppery gray and dusty green being the best. The brims are nicely bound, and hats are medium weight, lined. $5.

If your sweetie won't hold hands at the game, take refuge in a pair of string gloves. These came over last year from the Alps or somewhere high like that, and have taken hold with a vengeance. And no wonder. They are warm, comfortable, fit well and wash easily. One downtown store has a nice assortment, in plain colors, for only $1.50.

What with the immense popularity of mixed ensembles, slacks now have a definite and indispensable place in every man's wardrobe. One store has an extra-special sale of these right now. You'll find tweeds, herringbones, the new tick patterns, and a large variety of others, all sturdy and warm, for $4.95 and $5.95.

valentine

There's an outstanding sale of shirts, too—the popular Duke of Kent version—with widespread button-down collar. Available in cotton flannels with smart overplaids in fine colors—maroon and black on white, for instance, and black and blue on white. Striped Oxfords and broadcloths are also included, in the same model. You'll like these, and they'll like you, and they're far and away the best we've seen for the money. The strain on your wallet is only $1.95.

Reversible Topcoats.

Reversible topcoats have also been adopted by a great portion of the well-dressed male population. We've discovered a coat of this sort for only $25. One side is gabardine, the other tweed—sort of a two-faced idea, and practical. Two large pockets, a comfortable balmacaan collar which will button up snugly at the neck. The coat is of the regulation raglan cut, with vertical slit pockets so the rain won't come in. The patterns of tweed are good—brown or gray, with faint overplaids of contrasting color.

The ripple of popularity for the reversed calf, or buckskin shoe, which started last year, has now become a tidal wave, and the guy who doesn't own a pair is in the same category with the fellow who says the horse will come back. Newest version is the Sand Shaggy (these manufacturers think of the cutest names!) which is a neutral sand color, in the two-eyelet version, with shield toe. Shield toe means a sort of moccasin type, but refined. Don't wear it with dark clothes, but it should go well with some things. Being of natural color, it is cleaned easily simply by rubbing it with fine sandpaper or a steel brush. It sells for $5.50.

Mr. Alexander's articles are written exclusively for The Post, and appear on this page every Friday. For information on men's fashions, or the names of the stores carrying articles described above, call National 4200, branch 323. Or write, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

A CLOUD of lace and a gown with a train, a satin slipper and a big bouquet—the prettiest bride takes the wedding glamour with a grain of rice. It's that little gray cot—or more probably that three-room apartment that she's most excited about. So wedding gift-givers, beware of the nifty little trinkets, because something that's a nifty little trinket to you may be just so much junk to the bride. The practical obvious things are safer—if you want your gift to have a part in her permanent plans as the good-looking black and white pots and pans are in this new kitchen.

* * * *

S. E. WRITES: I want to fix up my new kitchen, if that is possible, without spending much money. It is a very ordinary room with black trimmings for the stove and I have stunning black and white pots and pans—wedding shower presents. I plan to do the painting myself—what colors would you suggest for walls and floor? And what would you have for curtains? I have a breakfast set of table and chairs painted black and white . . . also gifts. I've culled out most of the gadgets that just clutter up.

* * * *

ANSWER: Why don't you paint the walls white and the floor bright red? Then get old-timey yellow calico with red and black sprigs in it. Make side curtains out of this with white ruffles all around and hang them over white glass curtains. You might also make chair pads out of the yellow calico with white ruffles. Another idea would be to paint the walls light green, then have the floors brick color and the curtains white with bands of green and brick color around the lower hem and tie-backs of green and brick colored bands.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, Oct. 10.

"THE BROADWAY MELODY" was very entertaining to Edythe Green, but she writes that there was a "discrepancy in the story." Jack Benny, as the columnist, and Robert Taylor, as the producer, both insist that June Knight would ruin Taylor's potential show.

The audience is supposed to believe that Miss Knight hasn't any talent. Yet, in the roof garden sequence and the night club scene, June Knight sings a song and does a dance. She displays much talent—the audience applauded.

But in the flicker, after seeing June Knight do this, we are supposed to believe that she couldn't do it in the show that is to be produced.

I don't know how you noticed this, Miss Green. Weren't you watching Eleanor Powell dance?

In "China Seas," when Robert Benchley, who plays the drunk, is talking to Timmons on the deck, the boat is moving. And in the background is seen a large ship and the name on this ship, says John Drennen, appears backward. Damn clever, these Chinese pictures.

Three men enter a bank to hold it up in "She Gets Her Man." When they come out only two are seen getting into the car, claims George Harkin. Yet a flash later the three are seen together. It's more' magic in the movies.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT in "She Married Her Boss" is seen telephoning from Barclay's Department Store, ordering a toy piano for Edith Fellows. She is heard telling the person to deliver the piano immediately to the Barclay home and is also heard giving the address.

Yet, says Robert Tufenkjian, Miss Colbert is seen entering the Barclay home with the little piano under her arm and then gives it to Edith Fellows.

In "Accent on Youth," writes Eleanore Holzer, the name of an actress in Stephen Gaye's play is Eleanor Darling, as noticed on the marquee of the theater where Gaye's play has been the attraction.

But at the party after the show, Mr. Gaye calls on the actress to make a speech and he introduces her as Miss Dorothy Darling. The Eleanor must have been her stage name.

The villain in "The Big Broadcast" puts a sleeping tablet in Lyda Roberti's and Jack Oakie's glasses of water. The villain intends to get rid of Oakie as soon as Miss Roberti falls asleep. Oakie, knowing this, runs over to his trick broadcasting set and yells for aid.

Then Oakie and Wadsworth run out, get in a carriage with Miss Roberti and, of course, the villain follows in a big movie chase scene. H. Slocomb, who didn't fall asleep, wants to know why Oakie and Roberti, who took the sleeping tablets, didn't go to sleep.

* * * *

IT happens only in the movies. And while we're about it, here are a few:

According to Ann Bosche, the hero can be shipwrecked on an island and he'll never need a shave. The heroine will also continue to get her hair marcelled and her nails manicured.

A hero will do a crossword puzzle and never have to look at the dictionary.

David Woodburn says a character can always walk into a hotel or an apartment house and, without inquiring for his party, can go immediately to the apartment he is seeking. An elevator will be waiting at the floor if it is needed.

The heroine never gets a run in her stocking.

* * * *

Only in the movies, insists Albert Rondez, all butlers are English. Maids are French. All cops are Irish. And no waiter can merely serve a meal. He must always be a comedy character.

Snow never melts on city streets. The subway is always crowded when the hero or heroine leaves a train. There is always a seat when they are getting on.

Card sharps are always called Ace or Duke. Telephone operators always chew gum. Gold diggers are always blonde.

15,000 Due To Witness Dairy Fete

Rebecca Rice, of Fairfax, to Rule Princesses of Piedmont.

350 to Participate in Festival Set Today at Manassas.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Manassas, Va., Oct. 10.—More than 15,00 persons, including Lieut. Gov. James H. Price of Virginia, are expected to witness the fifth annual Piedmont Dairy Festival here tomorrow when Miss Rebecca Rice, of Fairfax County, rules over a mythical court of princesses from northern Virginia counties.

Today approximately 350 persons participated in the dress rehearsal of the "milky way" pageant.

While Miss Rice and her court went through their processional, floats were being decorated in all parts of the Piedmont area. More than 50 bedecked automobiles and trucks will participate in the procession of the "milky way." The queen will ride in a carriage covered with flowers.

Air Show Planned.

Included in tomorrow's all-day pageant will be an air show of several airplanes and a dirigible. The queen and her court have been invited to view the spectacle from the cabin of the dirigible.

Following band and orchestra concerts in the morning, the pageant will start at 10:30 a. m., with more than 1,000 Prince William County school children depicting the four episodes of "Around the Clock With the Milkman."

Miss Rice will be crowned during the afternoon by Lieut. Gov. James H. Price of Virginia. The coronation will be preceded by a group of interpretive dances by the Callaway School of Dance and choral numbers from a group of 40 girls from the Fredericksburg State Teachers College.

Amplifiers to Be Used.

Seating arrangements, boxes and a grandstand, have been erected for several thousand spectators. The pageant will be carried to others by amplifying equipment.

In addition to the pageantry, a diary judging contest will be conducted in which more than 200 boys from nearby counties will participate.

Augmenting the floats, hundreds of school children, members of civic organizations and agricultural clubs will form walking units of the afternoon parade. Music will be furnished by the Quantico Marine Band, the Culpeper Municipal Band, the Fifth Reserve Brigade Band and the Independent Boys Band of Washington.

Langley Air Cadet Plunges Into Bay

Flier Narrowly Escapes Death in Crash.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 10.—Flying Cadet Paul Amspaugh, of Langley Field, narrowly escaped death or serious injury today in the crash of his Army pursuit plane in Chesapeake Bay, 50 feet o: the beach.

Amspaugh, although submerged, climbed out of the wreckage with minor cuts and bruises. The plane flipped over on its back when it struck.

Amspaugh was flying at an altitude of about 40 feet when the motor of his plane went dead and the plane settled rapidly toward the water. Turning his craft toward the shore, Cadet Amspaugh was making a desperate effort to bring his plane down on the beach when the landing gear struck the water.

Doctors See Emergency Under Relief

Maryland Convention Recognizes Need to Continue Free Aid.

Homage Paid Archer, First Grad of U. S. Medical School.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Oct. 10.—The attention of practicing physicians was turned sharply towards the State's relief problem today by the medical and chirurical faculty of Maryland.

At its semi-annual convention here the faculty's council received a report of its relief program committee and followed it with a statement recognizing existence of "an emergency" as regards medical care for relief clients.

A summary of the report issued by the council asserted physicians must continue to "bear the burden" of free professional aid to indigent persons. A program to cope with the problem had been drafted, it explained, but steady reduction and expected cessation of relief funds prevented its application.

Pay Homage to Dr. Archer.

The council and the House of Delegates of the State Society met in brief executive session during the morning.

Dr. J. M. T. Finney, faculty president, announced that a committee had been named by the council to study and discuss a letter to the faculty from State Senator Raymond E. Kennedy, of Baltimore, on conditions at State hospitals for the insane.

During the afternoon 200 members of the faculty paid homage to Dr. John Archer, Harford County physician and first graduate of an American medical school. They gathered at the grave of the medical pioneer in a small cemetery at Churchville, 10 miles from here, where a wreath was laid on the tomb.

Afterward, they went to Olney, home of Mr. and Mrs. James Alexis Shriver, descendants of Dr. Archer, where they viewed many of the family's heirlooms, most of them associated with the early medical man.

Stratford, Lee's Birthplace, Will Open as Shrine Saturday

Memorial Foundation to Celebrate Raising of $500,000 in 44 States to Buy Original Home of Famed Southern General.

By the Associated Press.

Stratford, Va., Oct. 10.—Here near the banks of the winding Potomac, the river that rolls from the Nation's Capital through the historic meadowlands of Old Virginia, sons and daughters of the South he loved and the North he fought will gather Saturday to dedicate Robert E. Lee's birthplace, Stratford, as a national shrine.

Here was spent the early childhood of the man who resigned his commission in the United States Army to lead the forces that defended Dixie.

Not only the great Southern chieftain but all his patriot kin will be honored at the exercises at which Dr. Douglas Southall French, Richmond editor and author of the Pulitzer prize-winning "R. E. Lee," will make the dedicatory address.

The occasion will be the payment of the final indebtedness on the property by its owners, the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc., which has raised $500,000 in 44 States and several foreign countries despite the handicap of the business depression.

$265,515 For Purchase.

Miss Helen Knox, of New York, treasurer of the Lee Foundation, in a detailed statement of expenditures, tells for what purposes the money was used. The principal sum, $265,515, represented the purchase price payment, including interest on the mortgage, transfer taxes and other costs.

Improvements to the property cost another $100,000, including archeological and historical research, operation costs, the establishment of the plantation industries, the purchase of inventory for the plantation store at Stratford and for the executive office in Greenwich, Conn.

Pointing out that promotional expenses represent only about 3 per cent of the income received during the fiscal year which ended August 31, as compared, she said, with from 15 to 35 per cent for other organizations of this type, Miss Knox said she believed the foundation has "just cause for gratification."

Restoration of certain portions of buildings on this 1,100-acre estate in Westmoreland County has been completed within the seven years since the foundation's organization, including the gardens, garden walls, orchard and summer house, the old kitchen and smokehouse, the east hall of the mansion and the great hall, the southeast chamber, "the mother's room," with the nursery adjoining, the dining room and alcove. A new fireproof roof has been placed on the mansion, an electric power line, the superintendent's house and garage built, and old plantation roads restored.

Horses to Be Bred.

Stratford is taking on the appearance of a "gentleman's estate," and the plantation will become a thoroughbred horse-breeding establishment under the operation of Brig. Gen. B. F. Cheatham, resident superintendent, who will attempt to make the property self-supporting in this manner. Such use of the plantation is historically correct, for it was a famous breeding establishment prior to the Revolution.

An invocation by the Right Rev. E. S. George Tucker, Episcopal bishop of Virginia, will open the dedication exercises. An address of welcome will be made by Gov. George C. Peery and Dr. Freeman will deliver the dedicatory address.

The Rev. Giles B. Cooke, last surviving member of Gen. Lee's staff, will pronounce the benediction.

During the recessional "America" will be played and Gen. Lee's favorite hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," will be sung. The National Anthem will be the final number.

Court Hears Writ Appeal In Slayings

Pair Attack Conviction of Death of Couple in Spotsylvania.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 10.—Two cases of major concern to this section are to be considered by the supreme court of appeals in a special session in Richmond tomorrow. The body will hear arguments on an application for a writ of error in behalf of John Shell and Joe Jackson, Negroes convicted of murder in the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Coleman at their Spotsylvania County home in April, and the election contest between H. H. Walton and S. Bernard Coleman, Democratic nominee for the State Senate.

E. A. Norrell, Richmond Negro attorney, will present the case for the condemned pair, who received three reprieves from Gov. Peery and a fourth stay from the supreme court when the court decided at Staunton recently that it would hear arguments in the doomed men's move to void the trial at Spotsylvania in which they were sentenced to death.

Norrell will argue that animosity in Spotsylvania made it impossible for them to be given a fair and impartial trial; that there were no Negroes on the jury; that the accused were without "adequate representation;" and that the Negroes were forced to give testimony while in mortal fear of their safety, due to the atmosphere of hostility on the part of the spectators.

Gallico
Defends Drinking At Grid Contests; "Saved" Him Once.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—With the flowers still green and fresh over the grave of prohibition, I note with alarm that there are agitations already springing up against the drinking of spiritous liquors at football games. The Big Ten in the Midwest is inaugurating a drive against stimulation that goes beyond nine rahs and a skyrocket, and at Champaign, Ill., the home of Illinois University, the City Council is considering the passage of an ordinance which makes it illegal to display or drink alcoholic liquors at local athletic contests. As an old drinker of spirits at football games, I view this tendency with the utmost alarm and call upon all red-blooded Americans to take immediate steps to repel this reinvasion of their privacies.

I remember, distinctly, one Harvard-Yale game played at Cambridge, where my life was unquestionably saved by the fact that my telegraph operator (bless his dear memory) had fetched along a pot of old-fashioned New England rum. The press box was open. Snow descended. The wind howled. Ordinary clothing was helpless against the damp, penetrating cold.

I recall congealing from the toes up. By the second period it had reached my fingers, and the composition of a masterpiece was nipped at its source. At this point the telegraphist reached down beneath the bench and produced his pipkin of molasses rum.

THE consumption of a pint each brought us back to the point where we could get some kind of account of what the athletes were doing on the ice-encrusted field below, into the office. I then repaired to the warmth of the telegraph office to prepare a new and more coherent article for the morning paper.

This I will admit was an error. Five minutes in a heated room, and all went blank, as we used to say. Mr. Westbrook Pegler, then a fellow sportswriter, leaned over my shoulder to see what angle I was taking on the afternoon's classic and discovered to his amazement and mine that the new lead consisted of "By Paul Gallico—Soldier's Field, Cambridge, Nov. —The Quick Brown Fox Jumps Over The Lazy Dog, The Quick Brown Fox Jumps Over The Lazy Dog, The Quick Brown Dog Jumps Over The Lazy Fox, The Fox Brown Quick Dogs Over The Lazy Jump, etc., etc."

Mr. Pegler, though grim on paper, is personally soft-hearted. He made me a present of his own angle, which seemed to be that the Harvard team that had perpetrated such indignities on Albie Booth that afternoon had done the same thing the year before when they and Little Albie were all freshmen.

I DO not remember writing the piece, though they tell me I did, but it looked pretty good in the paper the next day. So much for a slight tactical error. I had made no mistake in drinking that life-saving rum. But I should have stayed out in the subzero weather a little longer.

The exigencies of football schedules and customs which forbids a postponement is responsible for the playing of games in weather that simply beggars description. Freezing cold, snow, sleet, knife-blade winds, rain falling in such impenetrable curtains that it is impossible to see the players on the field, make no difference.

The game goes on. The customers sit drenched, chilled and shivering beneath the pouring skies in open bowls on crete seats, stone beneath their feet, cowering under masses of pulpy newspapers, or wrecked umbrellas, huddling into soaked blankets and wet fur coats, utterly miserable, and not even rewarded for their hardihood because the teams on the field cannot play anything approaching the game of football as they skid and slide and slither in the muck, mud-covered from head to foot.

THE friendly bottle is small enough solace at a time like this. But it warms one tiny spot in the middle of the stomach, one tiny hot spark still aglow, and keeps one from utter desolation, chills and the pneumony.

Of course, there is nothing that compels a person to leave warm, comfortable shelter, and suffer through 2½ hours of football played in a cloud-burst or a blizzard, but if there must be prohibitory laws passed, they should, it seems to me, directed against universities forbidding them to stage their games in weather unfit for man or beast.

It is true that the students must return to their classes on Monday morning, those of them that attend classes, but it is also true that most of the football gates are acquired by advance sale. The dough is in the house. The hell with the public—play the game. It has often seemed to me that if the professional football players, all of them former collegiate players, can perform on the Sabbath without calling forth retributory lightnings from On High, that there is no particular reason why the big colleges can not postpone a big game scheduled for a Saturday that proves desperately inclement, and play it on the following Sunday.

But even then there would be no excuse for prohibiting the bottle at the football game. It looks like an entering wedge. All together, boys! Close up the gap! Drink hearty!

Virginia Star Is Beaten, 2 and 1, After Close First 9 Holes.

Mrs. Morrow Trounced by Washington Girl; Score, 3 and 2.

By Dave Herman.

TWO Washington women, Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, and 20-year-old Helen Dettweiler, of the host club, will meet tomorrow morning at Congressional Country Club in the final of the Middle Atlantic golf championship.

Mrs. Meckley, repulsed in last year's semifinals, gained revenge yesterday by defeating Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, 19-year-old Virginia champion, 2 and 1, in a thrilling match.

Former Maryland champion, Miss Dettweiler, played rock-steady golf to eliminate Mrs. Boyd Morrow, of Baltimore, twice former titleholder, 3 and 2.

The final will start at 10 a. m., and will be 18 holes.

Wins Last Four Holes.

Mrs. Meckley made a championship finish to remove the medalist and odds-on favorite, winning the last four holes.

After a torrid hole-for-hole battle on the first nine, Mrs. Meckley went to the turn boasting a 2-up lead.

Then the complexion of the battle changed. Miss Harper, who dropped to a mere 100 pounds during her strenuous four days of playing, bounded back into form, took advantage of Mrs. Meckley's inaccurate shots and won four consecutive holes.

Miss Harper took the tenth and eleventh with 5s, the twelfth with a four when Mrs. Meckley's tee shot found a trap, and the thirteenth with a par 5, by arching her fourth shot dead to the pin.

Now 2 up, the little Virginian apparently was headed for victory, but, after reaching the short fourteenth green safely in 2, lying the same as Mrs. Meckley, Miss Harper 3-putted, missing an 11-inch putt. Mrs. Meckley won the hole, and touched off the spark that enabled her to blaze away for four winning holes.

Miss Harper, trapped on her second, dropped the fifteenth when Mrs. Meckley knocked in a 4-foot putt for a par 4. On the sixteenth, Mrs. Meckley knocked her tee shot out of bounds, but came back to play a masterful approach and sink an 8-footer for a 5, as Miss Harper, again trapped, 3-putted for a 6.

One up and two to go, Mrs. Meckley played safely on the seventeenth, climaxing the match by sinking an 8-foot putt for a par 4. Miss Harper, on in 2, again 3-putted, taking a 5.

Seven Holes Halved.

So close was the battle on the first nine that seven of the holes were halved. Mrs. Meckley won the fifth with a 6 to a 7. Miss Harper took 2 to get out of a trap, and the same mistake on the ninth again proved costly, as Mrs. Meckley ran down a 15-footer for her par 3 to go 2 up.

Mrs. Meckley needed par in for an 89, and Miss Harper par in, for a 92.

Miss Dettweiler, hitting "em longer than ever, got off to a flying start against Mrs. Morrow, winning the first hole with a birdie 5. She maintained her steady pace, gaining two breaks on the first nine when the Baltimorean was stymied both on the third and sixth holes, which Miss Dettweiler won.

Two up at the turn, Miss Dettweiler captured the tenth with a par 5, and, despite 3 putts on the twelfth, got a half in 4. Mrs. Morrow laid her second shot 6 feet from the fourteenth and with a 3 to a 4, but Helen came back to sink a 10-footer, after putting short, to win the fifteenth and go 3 up again. The match ended on the sixteenth, where both made par 4s.

Runyan Leads At Louisville With a 67
Is Aided by 160-Yard Shot on Approach; Ghezzi a Stroke Behind.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 10.—Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., national P. G. A. champion, scored 67, 4 under par, to take the lead by 1 stroke over Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., after 18 holes of play in the $5,000 Louisville Open golf tournament this afternoon.

Coming down the stretch in sensational style, Runyan holed a 160-yard approach shot for an eagle 2 on the sixteenth. He missed a 2½-foot putt on the final hole to miss tying the course record of 66.

Among the higher scorers was Chandler Harper, of Norfolk, Va., who carded 39—38—77.

Women's Regional Pin League Opens
South Atlantic Bowlers to Begin Play Sunday.

The South Atlantic Women's Bowling League, formed along the same lines as the newly formed South Atlantic Men's Bowling League, is scheduled to get under way on Sunday at Baltimore.

The league is made up of eight teams—two each from Norfolk, Richmond, Baltimore and Rosslyn—and includes among its contestants 30 of the ranking women bowlers of the country.

The teams are scheduled to meet twice in each half of a split season and will finish on March 21, the date of the national tournament at Hartford, Conn. The winner of the Southern loop will then roll the winner of the Northern loop—represented by Hartford, Bridgeport, New Haven and New Britain—to declare a national team champion.

Daring Cavaliers Bow to Navy After Scoring on 97-Yard Gain

new period and players failed to make any impression on the snarling Orange.

Then came Martin's greatest offensive thrust of the afternoon. Virginia took the ball on its own 3-yard line and Martin dropped back to kick. He passed instead to "Bus" Male, out in open territory, and the lanky end scampered down to midfield. The field simply swarmed with Middies as Newell Thomas reached for Male on Navy's 45. He got him, but Male also got off a lateral that came to rest in Capt. Johnny Leys' arms.

Leys veered away from the sidelines, evaded two Navy tacklers, picked up his interference and criss-crossed back in front of the goal posts for a 45-yard run and touchdown, as the Virginia stands trembled beneath the frantic antics of Cavalier supporters.

Pass Intercepted.

They exchanged kicks and Navy's first team re-entered the fray. Virginia came into possession of the leather on Navy's 47 and Male carried it to the 37 before Capt. Lou Robertshaw, Navy center, intercepted Martin's pass, giving his team the ball on the 44.

The Navy broke into a double-quick march down the field that saw Schmidt race around right end to Virginia's 34, and again to the Cavaliers' 18. They stabbed at the line three times, but ineffectively, before Pratt pegged a brisk pass to Fellows in the end zone for the touchdown. Cole's attempted placement was wide.

The half ended with Virginia leading, 7 to 6.

The throng had hardly settled back in its seats after a hilarious burlesque football game between halves, awaiting the resumption of the thrilling duel being fought before it, when Jack Schmidt took Martin's kick-off on his own 5-yard line and threaded his way through the entire Virginia team for a 95-yard run and touchdown that clinched the game. This time Cole's kick was good.

Second Team Scores.

It was on the first play of the fourth period, also, that Navy's superiority was definitely established by a third touchdown that raised the count to 20 to 7, and eliminated Virginia from further competition. Navy's second team made the score, counting on a well executed pass from Fay Wilsie to Bob Antrim. This time it was Dick Bull who converted.

The Tars satisfied their voracious appetite for points with another touchdown late in the final period, when "Mule" Thomas bucked the line for 3 yards, and the score after the second team had brought the ball deep into Virginia territory following an exchange of kicks.

They were still disputing the matter on the Old Dominion's side of the field when time expired.

W. & L. Frosh Face V. P. I. Yearlings

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., Oct. 10.—Washington and Lee's freshman team, seeking to make up for its loss to Richmond here last week, will meet the yearlings of Virginia Tech on Wilson Field tomorrow afternoon. It will be the first home appearance of the Little Generals this year.

In a slow and somewhat listless game, the freshmen bowed to the University of Richmond Frosh, 14-0.

The Little Generals are coached this year by Amos Bolen, of Ashland, Ky., president of the student body and a star guard on the W. and L. team of two years ago. Assistant coaches are Chip Jones, Cleveland, Tenn., and Lewis Martin, of Richmond, Va., both members of the Generals last year.

Cards' Collins Offer Refused By Terry
Won't Give Hubbell and Ott for First Baseman and Medwick.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants today said he had refused an offer by the St. Louis Cardinals to trade First Baseman Jim (Rip) Collins and Outfielder Joe Medwick for Pitcher Carl Hubbell and Outfielder Mel Ott, Giant stars.

The offer, Terry said, was made by Branch Rickey, of the Cardinals, during the second game of the World Series at Detroit.

Terry, in Chicago, as a Memphis delegate to the Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, said:

"I told Rickey he'd have to take me, too, in that deal. I wanted Collins. I still want him, but at no such price of Hubbell and Ott. Rickey told me he had six men I could have in a deal, or deals, if I wanted 'em. When I refused his offer of Collins and Medwick, he asked me what I'd give for Collins. I told him to name his price. He said he'd think it over, so that's all there is to it so far."

Denies Camilli Deal.

Terry also denied reports that, in the event he couldn't obtain Collins, he would trade Roy Parmelee, Mark Koenig and Hughie Critz, plus a good chunk of cash, for Dolph Camilli, Philadelphia first baseman, to take up where he, Terry, wants to leave off.

"Parmelee stays with the Giants," Terry said. "I'll start all over with him. I'm not going to give him to any club and have him come back and beat our ears off. He's a good pitcher and he'll pitch for the Giants."

Handley Team Meets W. & L. High's Eleven

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 10.—Handley High School will journey to Clarendon, Va., this week-end to meet Washington and Lee High School.

Minus several stars from last year, the Handleyites have played two games. The first saw Berkeley Springs (W. Va.) High School beaten, 19 to 0. Last week, however, the best the locals could do was to battle Harrisonburg (Va.) High school to a scoreless tie.

Many Upsets Tomorrow Looming
Eight Games Stand Out as Having Possibility of Reversal.

Rams, Vandy, Auburn, Manhattan, Nebraska May Surprise.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—You don't have to smoke an opium pipe to get this way, but Saturday provides more room for major upsets than probably will come along again before the end of the college football season.

The schedule is fraught with possibilities and very little assistance is needed from Lady Luck to make them come true. Consider a few of the chances for reversals:

Nebraska to beat Minnesota (the Gophers aren't star-studded like last year and the Cornhuskers have Lloyd Cardwell, who looks and acts like Minnesota's 1934 back field rolled into one).

May Be Too Eager.

Auburn to take Tennessee (the Vols will be fighting mad to recover prestige after taking a drubbing from North Carolina and may be a bit too eager, while Auburn's hopes have been soaring since shutting out Tulane).

Fordham to give Purdue her first Eastern intersectional defeat in nine years (the Boilermakers' will miss Half Back Cecil Isbell, who helped them down Northwestern's Wildcats. Fordham has a rugged line and an assortment of versatile backs that ought to check the invaders' winning ways in this section).

Manhattan to conquer Louisiana State (Chick Meehan has been "building up" the Greenies for a couple of years and they appear ready and are due to crack down on a major opponent, but L. S. U. is well fortified and probably will uphold the dopesters.)

Wisconsin Picked.

Wisconsin over Notre Dame (the longest shot of them all. Notre Dame's back-field talent is rated the best in the country, but the Irish line isn't as well finished by any means; Doc Spears' Badgers haven't won a game yet, but there's always that chance they may snap back into form Saturday and make it plenty tough for Layden's legion).

Vanderbilt's Commodores to sink Temple (like all Ray Morrison-coached elevens, Vanderbilt has a powerful and perplexing passing attack that may shove Warner's Owls back on their heels. It won't be a fluke if Vandy wins.)

Jones' First Big Test.

Oklahoma over Texas (it's Biff Jones' first big test in his new job

The Parade of the All-Stars of U. S. Colleges
Dartmouth—Its All-Time Honor Roll

Gus Sonnenberg, '20, Is Awarded Tackle Post on Big Green.

By George Trevor,

Nationally Known Football Authority.

WHEN Eleazar Wheelock took his Bible, his drum and 500 gallons of old New England rum into the White Mountain wilderness to found an Indian school, he started something. That something was a football tradition that has grown from a modest beginning until today the name Dartmourth is known on the gridiron from coast to coast. The small college extolled by Daniel Webster is no longer small, but from the first Dartmouth turned out players of national stature.

You must go back to 1908 to find the greatest center to wear pine-tree green. His name was Harry Hooper and though he played only freshman year, before death cut him down, his exploits form a Dartmouth legend. Hooper had never played football until he entered Hanover yet he made the All-American team right off the reel in an era when Walter Camp rarely glanced outside the Big Three portals. Hooper's amazing exhibition in the Harvard Stadium in 1903 enabled Dartmouth to score its first victory over the Crimson, while Bill Cunningham, a colorful, wide-ranging showman, was easily the best of Dartmouth's post-war centers. How he loved a rough and tumble scrap!

Fat Spears looked roly-poly to the casual eye, yet his strength was prodigious and his speed surprising. Despite his rotund build he had unusual agility and hurled his vast bulk right into the heart of every play. He took up coaching after graduation and taught successfully at West Virginia, Dartmouth, Oregon, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Swede Youngstrom, a tow-head giant, had no equal at knifing through to block a kick. He tied Colgate in the 1919 thriller by blocking four Maroon punts, one of which yielded a touchdown. Joe Gilman of the cherubic face and mammoth frame, gave DeWitt of Princeton a bad hour in 1903.

Gus Sonnenberg could pull a hotel room radiator out by the roots and toss it into the street. He did it once just for a lark. A member of the war-time shell-backs, Gus found football rather tame after the Argonne. He later transferred to

Dartle Wins in Thrilling Five-Horse Finish in Laurel Sprint

Victor Comes From Rear Of Field

Three Noses and Head Separate Group in 6-Furlong Race.

Heading Home and Wise Prince battled for the doubtful honor of setting the pace. In fact most of the crowd had counted Dartle out of it. But inside the sixteenth pole, Jockey Balaski pounded his mount and the colt responded with the necessary leaps and bounds to be up in what the horsemen call "the concluding strides."

Bloodroot in Sixth.

The sixth race, programmed as the feature, proved an interesting four-horse race but resulted in an easy victory for Bloodroot, an E. R. Bradley representative. The daughter of Blue Larkspur, was reserved off the pace set by Deduce, gathered momentum at the head of the stretch and then won going away by a length and a half. Deduce managed to salvage second money with Boston Brook third and Toro Flight, the only other starter, last.

The time of 1:42 4-5 was the fastest of the meeting for the mile and 70 yards. Bloodroot was the favorite at a $4.20 mutuel.

The day's daily double brought a reward of $30.50 for those who backed the combination of Inscription and Still Alarm.

Inscription, owned and operated by the Bond family, of Baltimore, drove to a length victory in the first race, a 6-furlong sprint for cheap ones. Sainted, after a rough trip, was second, and Helios, far back for 3 furlongs, was third. Inscription rewarded with a $9.90 payoff.

Favorite Easy Winner.

The favorite players got a chance to cheer in the second race, when Grand Knight, an odds-on favorite, proved much the best. Freddie Faust waited until the swing for the stretch to make his move and then drew clear. Counter Pass came from far back to threaten mildly. Sit Out, the pacesetter most of the way, was third. Grand Knight paid $3.70.

Still Alarm rang the bell in the third race, defeating a field of seven others in a mile test. Jockey Balaski restrained the son of Blaze off the pace set by Must Be and went to the front when turned loose. Good Visibility made a futile but game effort in the stretch and defeated Must Be, the pacesetter, for third money. Still Alarm paid $5.20.

James City took the measure of a field of speedy sprinters, but only after a nose struggle with My Colin. Highpool was third. James City went to the front at the break and stayed there under brisk handling by Jockey Hunter. The winner was an $8.10 betting proposition.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INSCRIPTION, $9.90, $6.60, $4.50; SAINTED, $6.30, $4.90; HELIOS, $9.30.

INSCRIPTION, away in the first flight and on the inside of the leaders, assumed command when straightened into the home stretch, moved clear, but had to be shaken up nearing the finish. SAINTED, slow to get into his best stride, bettered his position steadily and closed full of run. HELIOS, away slowly, secured racing room in the last half-mile and finished with a rush. VERITAS went prominently and held on with good courage. CANTERET showed nice speed while setting the pace, but failed to rally for the closing test. TIDDLEWINK was strongly handled and had no excuses. WHISKORA and CRESCENT MOON broke slow.

SECOND RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:18. Off at 2:18½. Winner, Starmount Stable's dk. b. c. (2), by Sir Gallahad III—Gay Arnes. Trained by J. M. Milburn. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:15, 1:42.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAND KNIGHT, $3.70, $2.40, $2.20; COUNTER PASS, $3.60, $2.80; SIT OUT, $2.80.

GRAND KNIGHT, sluggish going to the first turn, went to the outside after reaching the back stretch, worked his way to the leaders steadily, then held on strongly after displacing SIT OUT entering the home stretch. COUNTER PASS, outrun early, responded when put to a hard drive, circled her field and finished with excellent courage in spite of punishment. SIT OUT raced GAY BRIDE into defeat to gain command midway of the back stretch, was steadied until challenged, but failed to stay under punishment. BENGAY went strong for six furlongs, then weakened.

THIRD RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:46. Off at 2:46½. Winner, Chevy Chase Stable's dk. b. c. (2), by Big Blaze—Canteen. Trained by G. Conway. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 4-5, 1:15 3-5, 1:41 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STILL ALARM, $5.20, $2.90, $2.50; GOOD VISIBILITY, $4.60, $3.40; MUST BE, $4.10.

STILL ALARM, forwardly placed after saving ground at the first turn, went up on the inside of MUST BE midway of the back stretch, assumed a short lead when reaching the final furlong pole, then holding on stoutly, outstayed GOOD VISIBILITY. The latter, following close up and kept on the outside, was intermittently punished in the drive. MUST BE, closed with good courage, but lost the decision when put to a hard drive, weakened during the last furlong. BAY GIFT raced strongly, but could not stay after seven furlongs. CINAR lacked early speed and was never a factor. BURNT TRAIL and PEACE MOVE were held safe.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Rogers Forge. Purse, $900. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:17. Off at 3:19½. Winner, F. S. Page's b. g. (2), by St. James—Black Bush. Trained by G. H. Strate. Value to winner, $675; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23, 0:46 4-5, 1:12 3-5.

†Glen Riddle Farm entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES CITY, $8.10, $4.00, $2.60; MY COLIN, $3.60, $2.40; HIGHPOOL, $2.50.

JAMES CITY, away quickly and showing good speed, raced HIGHPOOL into submission, responded willingly when challenged and, holding on gamely, just lasted long enough to outstay MY COLIN. The latter, rated close to the leaders, swung to the outside entering the home stretch and was carried the winner down a wide stride nearing the finish. HIGHPOOL, hard ridden to hold a contending position, saved ground and barely lasted to withstand WAR EMBLEM. The latter worked his way up on the outside and finished full of run. CHALLEPHEN could not better his position. SANDSTONE displayed nice speed for five furlongs. ARMY AND NAVY raced very green.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:50. Winner, Riverglade Stable's b. c. (4), by Dodge—On Time. Trained by S. W. Ward. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARTLE, $9.60, $5.60, $5.20; RED WAGON, $5.60, $3.30; HEADIN HOME, $7.20.

DARTLE, going in his best form and favored by the early pace, gained fast when reaching the home stretch after coming to the outside and, in a stout finish, was up in the concluding strides. RED WAGON broke swiftly, lost command midway of the final turn, but continued stoutly after being placed to punishment and just failed to get up. HEADIN HOME offered stiff contention while racing on the outside of the leaders and responded gamely for the final drive. ISAIAH was rushed into the run down RED WAGON and he weakened after getting into a lead. WISE PRINCE came through on the inside entering the home stretch and finished in resolute fashion. DOWDY DELL closed with a tremendous rush after being slow to get going.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. The Wyemill. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:16½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. f. (3), by Blue Larkspur—Knockaney Bridge. Trained by W. Hurley. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:13, 1:37 1-5, 1:42 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOODROOT, $4.20, $2.40, out; DEDUCE, $4.70, out; BOSTON BROOK, out.

BLOODROOT, kept under pressure in the early racing while on the inside, went to the outside when engaging the leaders entering the home stretch, was carried wide by DEDUCE at the stretch turn, but wore the latter down inside the closing furlong to come home the winner at the end. DEDUCE went into an early lead, went along under steadying restraint, but could not withstand the winner after shaking off BOSTON BROOK. The latter was taken in hand immediately after the start, went along on his own courage, but flattened out when put to a drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:46½. Winner, Mrs. J. C. Marino's ch. g. (7), by Golden Guinea—Precipitate. Trained by W. Durnan. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50, 1:15 2-5, 1:41 4-5, 1:54 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN PLAY, $22.60, $9.60, $6.00; POTION, $7.70, $3.80; IDLE FLIRT, $3.30.

GOLDEN PLAY, taken to the outside and forced wide after reaching the back stretch, reached contention midway of the final turn, closed strongly and came out steadily in the final furlong. POTION, prominent from the beginning, challenged strongly in the last half-mile, met with interference during the stretch drive, but closed gamely when steered to the outside in the last sixteenth. IDLE FLIRT, forced to work her way up on the outside of her company, gained a slight lead at the last elbow, but faltered in the final issue. CANIMAR closed a good gap from a slow beginning. BUNTINO could not threaten. ROYAL LASSIE had no mishaps.

V.-C. Chemical Faction Backs Deposed Head

Ivey Group Threatens to Carry Battle to Courts.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 10.—A bitter struggle among stockholders for control of the $30,000,000 Virginia-Carolina Chemical Corporation seemed headed straight for the courts today as members of a faction defeated in an early morning stockholders' meeting rallied around A. L. Ivey, ousted president, and Joseph A. Dart, former director, an Associated Press dispatch from Richmond said.

Both men were dislodged from their directorships at a stormy meeting held last night.

The meeting resulted in victory for George S. Kemp and the faction which he heads. Kemp, W. S. Battle, jr., Alexander Cameron, jr., F. M. Collier, J. F. Henderson, W. H. Slaughter, Leon M. Nelson and Ross H. Walker constitute the new directorate of the company.

As the result of last night's balloting became known members of the Ivey-Dart group declared they felt that the meeting had been illegally called and said they would take the matter to court.

Ivey asserted that he felt the entire proceedings should be reviewed by the courts.

A special meeting of a group of 7 per cent stockholders to decide what action, if any, might be taken was in prospect today.

Landis Doubts If SEC Is Able To Halt a Boom

More Power, He Says, to Be Granted in an Emergency.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 10.—James M. Landis, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, today expressed doubt over the commission's ability to check an inflationary stock market boom.

Attending the regular press conference of Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, Landis was asked whether the commission would be able to cope with an inflationary market situation, against which Gay issued a warning in an address last night.

Landis said the commission was conscious of pressures which would be brought to bear against checking a boom, but added that "many of these pressures to which Mr. Gay refers have no relationship to the SEC, but deal mainly with monetary policies."

Theory Permits Control.

"In order to deal with the situation," he continued, "it would be necessary to go far outside the SEC. The theory of the exchange act was that powers would be given that would control the ordinary situation that might develop."

Landis said SEC officials would welcome any tests of constitutionality of the securities and exchange act or the securities act. He said the commissioners themselves had no doubt that the law creating the SEC was in strict accordance with the Constitution.

He emphasized the fact that the purpose of Government regulation of security markets was to assure that quoted values accurately reflected economic conditions. "We can't tell," Landis said, "until a boom comes along whether or not we could successfully sit on it."

The SEC chairman revealed that complaints of violations of the security laws were coming in at the rate of over 400 a month.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stock Exchange Does Its Part With Bullish Prediction and Stocks Spurt—Wheat Climbs—Government Bonds Sag—Dollar Rises.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Oct. 10.—Government bonds were a little lower in price, but a miniature boom was the stock market's response to the backhanded prediction of President Gay, of the New York Stock Exchange, of an inflationary boom. Trading was the most vigorous at the outset, and the ticker tape soon fell several minutes behind in its effort to keep up with the floor activities of the speculators. The atmosphere cleared a little after the first hour but the trend of prices continued upward. Only a handful of important stocks showed losses on the day, and the buoyant ones rose 1 to 3 points. Stock turnover was the second largest of the month at around 1,750,000 shares. Wheat was higher, the December option closing ⅜ of a cent higher at 105¼ cents a bushel in the Chicago market.

Money markets drifted. Little fear is held of any drawing down of Treasury balances in order to pay off unconverted Liberty bonds. Foreign currencies were quiet after yesterday's rally in sterling and the gold exchanges. Francs fell under the gold point and lire were down. Further gold shipments from Paris are expected.

This week's statement of the Bank of France shows a further gain in gold, in spite of the steady efflux of gold from France. The increase was 141,000,000 francs. That is explained here by the assumption that the gain comes from a release of gold held under earmark at the Bank of France by the British equalization fund. The gold has been employed in an attempt to regulate the sterling market, and consequently the Bank of France has taken in gold faster than it has paid it out.

Just a Hint, Huh?

Naturally no broker cares to see a boom in the stock market, for that might lead to more business than he could conveniently handle, late tickers, night work in town, larger income taxes, increased office staff, and all that. Just the same a fact might as well be looked squarely in the eyes, and President Gay of the stock exchange, while not exactly predicting a stock market boom, told his hearers last night that he feared one. The reason it might come, he thought, would be the swale of cheap money, under more or less doubtful control of the Federal Reserve Board. As for the stock exchange's control over speculation, Mr. Gay left his hearers to believe that sufficient to keep matters in order, insofar as the mechanics of the thing are concerned.

Whether Mr. Gay's fears of a boom are well founded, the bull speculaotrs were quick to grasp their cue. They tried hard from the opening to bring on said boom as quickly as possible, under the supposed impression that they had only to look to the Federal Reserve Board for warning signals. Neither Mr. Berle, lay member of the stock exchange governing committee, nor Mr. Gay, may have intended in their talks yesterday to give the bull speculators a hint that anything they might do would be all right; but such an interpretation might well be forgiven any one, lacking background, perhaps, who read too casually their remarks.

Cheap Money Not Needed.

Far from his intentions as it may have been, the effect of President Gay's statements on the public will be to create the impression that the authorities would like to whip up a boom. Merely as prophets they scarcely will be given more credit than the horde of prognosticators already heard; so that the logical assumption on the part of the public will be that what really is meant is a notice that the bars of regulation will not be bolted too tightly or too high for a good jumpin' hoss with plenty of cheap bank credit in his margin account.

Ever since the Treasury, with the Federal Reserve Board in tow, began its excessively cheap money policy designed primarily to finance the Treasury, and partly to stir up business activity and lift commodity and security prices, grave fears have arisen among thoughtful observers lest an inflationary movement follow which could not be controlled. The danger is increasing, with the additional Treasury borrowing and the heavy gold imports backing a natural upward movement in stocks based on improving business.

Just the same, there would appear to be no point in the stock exchange head's calling attention of the local market to the "inflammability of the material with which we are dealing," unless he means for his words to be taken to heart at Washington. So far as the stock market is concerned an inflationary boom could take place without the assistance of cheap money. The wildest speculation among the bulls in 1928 and 1929 was carried on with call money rising at times as high as 20 per cent, and with 10 to 15 per cent regarded as more or less normal.

Big Tobacco Crop Seen by Government

By the Associated Press.

A 16,000,000 pound increase in the Agriculture Department forecast on 1935 flue cured tobacco production was reported yesterday with the October 1 figure 759,696,000 pounds as compared with 743,736,000 forecast September 1.

Production of all types of tobacco for the year was forecast at 1,272,945,000 pounds, about 18.5 per cent above the 1934 crop, but 11 per cent below the 1928-32 average. Record yields per acre were reported for all areas growing flue cured.

Columbia Ass'n Insures Funds Up to $5,000

Building Society Assets Gain $400,000 in Past Year.

Substantial gains in both savings accounts and mortgage loans were made during the past year by the Columbia Building Association, according to the report of the Secretary, Clarence E. Kefauver, made to the members of the association at their twenty-eighth annual meeting, held last night at the association's office, 716 Eleventh street northwest.

Total assets as of September 30 were $3,460,058.37, a gain of over $400,000 for the year. Mr. Kefauver said that this was the largest gain for any single year since organization 28 years ago. Dividends distributed to members during the last year exceeded $100,000, and the surplus account and reserve accounts were substantially increased.

The substantial growth of the association during the last year was attributed to the Columbia's new plan of variable interest rates of 5 per cent, 5¼ per cent and 6 per cent, based upon the amount and soundness of the security offered in each individual case.

Is 28 Years Old.

The Columbia is celebrating its twenty-eighth anniversary by announcing insurance of its accounts up to $5,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. According to Mr. Kefauver, secretary, the Columbia Building Association is the only institution of its kind in the District of Columbia offering this additional protection. During the past year Columbia has made loans totaling nearly $750,000, secured by first deeds of trust.

The following officers were reelected: John B. Harrell, president; Harry B. Denham, vice president; C. Albert White, treasurer; C. E. Kefauver, secretary. Directors elected in addition to the above officers were J. William Weber, Frank A. Auth, C. Gay Harrell and Albert O. Denham.

N. Y. Life Insurance Co.

The Washington branch of the New York Life Insurance Co. has just completed its twenty-first consecutive month in which the agents paid for more business than the corresponding month of last year, according to Earl D. Krewson, agency director. He reports that the local office is 28 per cent ahead of the same time last year with a total of over $4,500,000 in paid business.

Trust Company Dividend.

At the regular monthly meeting the directors of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent, payable November 1 to stockholders of record October 23. It was announced the books would be closed for the transfer of stock from that date until November 2.

Junior Board of Commerce.

Loren H. Cluster, agency organizer of the New York Life Insurance Co.; Philip Herrick, NRA lawyer, and Boyd Hines, an executive of the Community Chest, have been elected directors of the Junior Board of Commerce.

U. S. Gold Stores Reach New Peak

By the Associated Press.

The weekly Federal Reserve Bank statement yesterday disclosed that another gold peak had been established for American monetary gold stocks during the week ending October 9.

Imports of $49,000,000 brought the hoard to $9,463,000,000, a sum $1,478,000,000 in excess of the stocks held at this time last year.

The week also saw an increase of $106,000,000 in reserve balances of member banks, bringing the total to $5,330,000,000, an amount approximately $2,720,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury on October 8 was:

Receipts, $17,029,876.44; expenditures, $23,034,941.05; balance, $1,734,318,084.16; customs receipts for the month, $7,668,529.29.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $1,080,502,133.66; expenditures, $2,022,508,091.82, including $976,828,392.61 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $942,003,958.16; gross debt, $29,451,511,500.69, a decrease of $1,408,002.00 under the previous day; gold assets, $9,444,447,083.93.

United Air Lines Fly Record Mail

Chicago, Oct. 10.—United Air Lines is now carrying an average of 458,000 pieces of mail daily, a record high, and during the past six months has flown 1,298 tons of mail, an increase of 40 per cent over a year ago, President W. A. Patterson announced today. Reasons assigned for the substantial increase include reduction of air-mail postage to 6 cents an ounce and faster schedules.

Potato Crops Lower, Wheat And Corn Up

Changes Will Have Slight Effect on Prices, Wallace Says.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Crop Reporting Board forecast yesterday a nearly 2 per cent reduction in prospective 1935 potato production during September, while corn prospects improved about 1 per cent.

Secretary Wallace said, however, the anticipated 29,000,000-bushel greater corn production—boosting the total to 2,213,319,000—and 7,000,000 bushel expected decrease in potato production would have no material effect on agricultural prices.

The board forecast a 2,213,000,000-bushel corn crop on the basis of October 1 conditions. It said the estimates may be high because of heavy frosts the first week in the month. The forecast production is far in excess of last year's drought crop of 1,377,000,000 bushels, but about 14 per cent below the average production for the 1928-32 period.

Estimates of spring wheat, barley and hay production were revised upward 2 per cent from a month ago, and forecasts for most late crops were reported slightly improved. An increase of 4,320,000 bushels of all wheat to a total of 598,935,000 was predicted.

Bank Clearings 25% Higher Than Year Ago

All Financial Centers, Except Richmond, Report Gains.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 10.—Bank clearings continue well above those reported at this time in recent years. The total for the 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, October 9, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,025,048,000, against $4,021,619,000 a year ago, an increase of 25 per cent. For the preceding week the advance was 37.1 per cent. At New York City, clearings were $3,238,625,000, an increase of 28.7 per cent over the amount reported last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York City of $1,786,423,000 was 18.7 per cent higher.

The increase was well distributed throughout the United States. It was particularly large at a number of Western centers. There was also quite a little improvement in the South, for which section a number of prominent cities have previously reported losses. At Pacific Coast points, clearings were again very heavy. An exception was the Richmond district with a decline of 7.6 per cent.

In addition to New York City, gains were large at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Louisville, New Orleans, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. The total for the past week was below that for the week preceding, which included the heavy clearings for the first two days of October, by $1,375,604,000. A year ago for the same two weeks the reduction was $648,168,000.

Figures at leading centers, showing increases and decreases as compared with those of a year ago, are printed herewith; also daily bank clearings for the year to date:

What I went through. That Dictatress, Chloe XIV, throwing a wedding for me.
And her boy friend, the Mogul. What a big temper in such a small man.
